COUNCIL TO DROP 900 JOBS, CUT ALL SALARIES ONE-SIXTH

Today

Beer, But Not Wine.

Too Much Crime Sentiment.

Statues Worth $900,000.

Mrs. Frazier's Five Bullets.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 23.

BY 230 TO 165 the House of Representatives says "The people must have beer," and they probably will get it. The Senate will take the hint and remember the vote.

This intelligent nation, which for many years past has been on a whisky, gin and drug basis, will be hereafter on a legal beer basis, modified by whisky, gin and drug bootlegging.

The great vineyards of California, Ohio, New York and other states will continue to be run on a bootleg basis, with compressed grapes, grape juice, sold to become badly made wine later on.

CHURCHES, legally, will continue to get their wine for the sacrament. It is amusing that this country, which professes to believe that Christ changed water into wine, to make cheerful a wedding, a country in which tens of millions believe that wine on the altar becomes the actual blood of Christ, should say to the population:

"You may have beer, legally, but wine, like whisky, gin and drugs, you may not have except on a bootleg basis."

ROBERT ELLIOTT BURNS, committing a robbery in the state of Georgia, was put to work on the chain gang. He did not like it, escaped twice, and a book and moving picture have been prepared narrating his alleged sufferings, called "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang."

In addition to his holdup in Georgia, it appears that Mr. Burns is also a fugitive from New York, accused of forgery. Georgia wants him back to finish his sentence. Gov. Moore, of New Jersey, refuses extradition and the "fugitive from a chain gang" is safe and free in New Jersey.

AFTER HIS release the crowd pushed and struggled to congratulate him. All very pretty, BUT making a hero of a criminal should not be overdone.

Those who say, "In his holdup he got less than five dollars," should remember that he got all his victim had. Had the victim had $5,000, he would have taken that, and, presumably, would have been $4,995 worth more cheerful.

In addition, this particular criminal like thousands of others at large in this country, would doubtless have murdered the man held up had he resisted. It isn't wise to be too enthusiastic or tearful about a young gentleman who, after being indicted for forgery, goes out on the highway to rob, with the possibility of murder.

IT IS THE opinion of this writer it would be a wholesome thing to let Mr. Burns go back to Georgia, and learn that not everybody in the United States sympathizes with holdup men, gangsters, counterfeiters and potential murderers.

Georgia may be annoyed by exaggerated accounts of her prison cruelties, but she has one comfort that other states haven't. Holdups in Georgia are comparatively few, and gangsters avoid that state. They don't like people that take crime seriously.

PROF. APOSTOLOS ARVANITOPPOULOS, from Athens, who ought to know about art, says a statue in New York's Metropolitan Museum, 2,000 years old, worth $900,000 "in good times," was smuggled out of Greece "in a huge wooden crate, with the connivance of high authorities."

The museum answers:

"We bought it from a legitimate dealer for a good price. If Greek high authorities connived in breaking their own laws, that is not our responsibility."

PROF. ARVANITOPPOULOS' suggestion that the statue is worth $900,000 is exaggerated. Few statues are "worth" any such sum. The few include Michelangelo's "Moses," the "Venus di Milo," and the "Winged Victory," the first in Rome, the last two in the Louvre, in Paris. Such statues have no price. Mussolini wouldn't sell Michelangelo's "Moses" for enough to build ten battleships. And France would laugh if you offered one hundred millions each for the "Venus di Milo" and the "Winged Victory."

MRS. CHARLES R. FRAZIER, of Jacksonville, Fla., convinced that her husband's stenographer was breaking up the Frazier home, waited for the stenographer and shot her dead with five bullets.

Mr. Frazier at once had a physical breakdown and has since had a second breakdown. According to his wife, he had taken away the three youngest of her five children, and wrote:

"If you let me get a divorce I will bring the children back."

Had he not written that letter he might not have had the two breakdowns and the stenographer might not have been murdered.

HOW DO you explain the fact that when a primitive man finds that his wife is false he kills the wife, whereas a woman, when her husband is false, kills the other woman?

The explanation is simple without any help from Freud. The wife through the ages has killed the other woman, saving her husband, because her children might need him. The husband kills the false wife, because

PARIS ACTS TO REOPEN DEBTS

French Premier Pays Visit to U. S. Ambassador

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—In a sudden and dramatic reversal of France's previous war debt stand, Premier Joseph Paul-Boncour reopened negotiations with the United States today, asking the American embassy for advice regarding a debt formula acceptable to both nations.

Unexpected and unannounced, Premier Paul-Boncour called at the embassy, sought an audience with Ambassador Walter Evans Edge and then spent three-quarters of an hour in reviewing the entire situation.

ACTION UNPRECEDENTED

The action of the Premier was believed to be without precedent.

It was a dramatic and significant departure from the procedure which France followed during the weeks which preceded the Chamber of Deputies' decision to default on the payment due to the United States a week ago yesterday.

There was no official announcement made serving to disclose what prompted Paul-Boncour to abandon France's formerly uncompromising attitude and seek

AVALON FATHER DIES IN LEAP

A few minutes before 7 o'clock this morning Joseph Herrington slipped trousers and shirt on over his pajamas, shoved his feet into bedroom slippers, left his home at 806 Jackman avenue, Avalon, and shuffled through the fog to the nearby Dilworth Bridge.

The few persons waiting at the West Bellevue railroad station paid no attention to him, if they saw him at all. But a few minutes later they heard a crackling noise and saw Herrington's form tumbling from the long wooden stairway leading off the bridge.

At the railroad offices today it was announced Herrington, employed there since 1906, had started yesterday on a requested leave of absence to regain his health.

15 Periled by Bomb In Patton Township

Fifteen persons, including 13 children, were jarred by explosion of a small gunpowder bomb in the cellar of the home of Anthony Perlak at Adderly, a mining settlement in Patton Township, today. The bomb apparently had been placed on a cellar windowsill.

Perlak and five children were shaken from their beds.

Yule Beer Loses in Senate

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The drive to legalize beer before Christmas ended in failure today when the Senate refused to consider the necessary legislation before taking its yuletide holiday.

An effort by Senator Bingham (Rep.), of Connecticut, to call up his 3.2 per cent beer bill off the Senate calendar was defeated, 23 to 48, when Democrats voted almost solidly against it. Bingham planned to substitute the bill just passed by the House for his own measure.

MUST TAKE COURSE

Democratic leaders insisted that beer legislation take its "regular course" through the Senate committees. The House bill was referred yesterday to the Senate Judiciary Committee. Its chairman, Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, promised prompt action —btu after the holidays.

Bingham made his motion during the Senate's "morning hour." Under the rules it was not debatable, but both Bingham and Senator Robinson, the Democratic floor leader, were granted permission to make brief statements.

Robinson called the Senate's attention to the recent passage by the House of the Collier bill, legalizing 3.2 per cent beer. He declared the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which it was referred, would act promptly on the measure. He said:

"There is no disposition on my (Democratic) side to delay this legislation. There is a constitutional question involved in the Collier bill. For that reason, it was referred to the Judiciary Committee. Believing no wholesome end can be accomplished by taking up the Bingham bill when the same constitutional question arises, I shall vote first against proceeding to consider."

BINGHAM FIGHTS

Bingham protested that the constitutional issues had been aired for years. He pointed out that his beer bill was introduced a year ago—that a Judiriary sub-

Another Barber Shop Window Shattered

East Liberty's destructive barber war flourished today.

Shortly after midnight somebody hurled a bottle through the large plate-glass window of Joseph Marmarosa's barber shop at 6342 Frankstown avenue. Marmarosa, president of the Master Barbers' Association, gave away shaves in the recent price-cutting. His is the third shop attacked this week.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 23.—(INS.)—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, in one of his last official acts as Governor of New York state, today commuted the sentences of 23 inmates of the state's prisons. Six were convicted of murder, second degree, and three others originally were sentenced to the electric chair.

2 PREACHERS HELD IN DEATH

Admit Choking Child In Attempt to Cure Her

LINDEN, Tex., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Despite a purported confession, officers today continued an investigation of the death of a 5-year-old girl, allegedly at the hands of two itinerant preachers who sought to "drive out the devil" they believed responsible for her partial paralysis.

Murder charges were filed against the two—Paul Oaks and his brother, Coy Oaks—and precautions taken to prevent possible mob vengeance. Sheriff Nat Curtright said the two accused men, described by him as of the Apostolic faith, admitted they had choked the child to death in an attempt to cure her.

Officers said the preachers came to Cass County several months ago from another section of Texas, had been holding meetings in rural communities and had preached on the subject of faith healing. The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Clayton, allegedly was killed last Tuesday at the Clayton home.

George Wilson, a neighbor of the Claytons, told officers he found two men kneeling over the prostrate form of the child. They ordered him to leave, declaring he was a "devil." He said the child's father was in the room.

SEEK TO RESCUE 30 IN FLAMES

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—One man was fatally burned today and firemen made frantic efforts to find 30 others missing as flames raged in a six-story grain elevator at Twenty-eighth street and the Chicago River.

The wooden elevator and its 200,000 bushels of wheat, corn, oats and barley became a torch, its flames reaching 100 feet above the tower.

Their battle to subdue the blaze hopeless, firemen spent their efforts to prevent its spread to a larger concrete elevator nearby, where 1,000,000 bushels of grain were stored.

Walter Brazel was the only man known to be dead. A dust explosion near the top of the structure apparently started the conflagration and in a series of minor explosions as the fire spread downward Brazel's body was blown into the open.

Three others were burned badly and rushed to hospitals. When the fire broke out, 34 persons were known to have been working in the structure, owned by the Santa Fe Railroad and situated in its yards on the South Side. Whether all of these escaped the flames or were caught within could not be told. Loss was estimated at $1,000,000.

Trip Keeps Mrs. Hoover From Children's Fete

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover today told a group of mothers at Central Union Mission that she was sorry not to join in their children's Christmas party this year, but that she was needed more by a President. Mrs. Hoover, a patron of the mission who annually has appeared with Santa Claus to hand out gifts, said:

"One member of my family has worked so hard and so long, he really needs a little attention from me at Christmas time more than anyone else."

Not to disappoint the children too much, Mrs. Hoover distributed to them a few Christmas baskets while an orchestra played "Jingle Bells" and pictures were taken.

Mrs. Hoover told the mothers of the mission children that while they were enjoying their annual party, she would be "away out on the Atlantic Ocean or on a little island where it is warm, and the sea, I hope, a little smooth."

With a party of seven, the President and Mrs. Hoover will leave at 8 o'clock tonight by train for Savannah to sail on a Christmas holiday fishing trip.

There will be no itinerary, it was said today at the White House, but the party will merely drift along off the Georgia and Florida coasts and into their inland waterways wherever the fish bite best. The President expects to remain away until January 3 or 4.

Baer, Lardner and Pals Tell Santa Their Hopes

'Popeye' and 'Skippy' Join Writers in Yule Appeals

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—What do you want for Christmas?

Some want it hot, some want it cold, some want a new deal (particularly bridge players), and everybody wants prosperity.

Anyway, International News Service thought it would be a jolly idea to ask some of the well-known boys who get around a lot, who know human nature, what they wanted "Old Man Kringle" to bring down the chimney, and here's the result:

BUGS BAER, humorist—The only wish I have for my stocking is that my big toe stays in it.

RING LARDNER, author—I will be perfectly satisfied if Santa Claus leaves my stocking.

"POPEYE" (through Edgar C. Segar, his creator)—I wants Santa Claus to put a pair of edjamacated dice in me sock for Christwas so as I kin win money to buy spinach for poor kids.

"SKIPPY" (through Percy Crosby)—I hope all this talk of kids gettin' nothin' to eat on Christmas is just make-believe and you'll come through like you always did. Won't you? Just so's I'll feel easier in my mind, would you leave a little somethin' in my stockin' just so's I'll know everybody else is all right?

WALTER WINCHELL—My one big Christmas wish? Oodles of columns in advance and an apple.

TED COOK—I'd like to have a Baldwin iocomotive and 50 miles of track.

RUBE GOLDBERG—I hope that Santa Claus sends me a radio that will automatically tune out all sweet-voiced announcers.

MILT GROSS—I want a trio of efficient elves to pop out of my Christmas stocking and finish my work so I can play with my kids' toys.

SENATOR HUEY P. LONG—My wish for Christmas is something for everybody to eat—something for everybody to wear—a place for everybody to live—and after that a nice glass of three and one-half per cent beer.

1933 Dog Licenses Available in County

The 1933 dog licenses are ready for distribution, according to Beryl Johnston, of the State Bureau of Animal Industry, and must be on dogs by January 15.

Johnston said the licenses may be obtained from the County Treasurer or through any Alderman or Justice of the Peace.

Last year 32,493 dog licenses were issued in the county and there were 300 prosecutions for failure to obtain licenses.

Gasoline Price Cut One-Half Cent

Refineries serving Western Pennsylvania announced a reduction of one-half cent a gallon in the prices of all grades of gasoline this morning. This makes the retail price of motor gasoline 13 cents a gallon plus the three-cent state tax, and one-cent federal levy.

A reduction of one cent a gallon was made in Metropolitan Philadelphia, Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware.

SLASH AIMED AT PAY OF MAYOR

Bureau Heads Given Last Chance to Pare Forces

City Council will drop 900 city payrollers, spread a 16 2-3 per cent reduction over all salaries under its control, including its own, and recommend similar cuts in mandatory salary positions, according to reports from well-informed sources.

The 1933 budget will be $21,000,000, it was predicted.

Going back to the financial standards of city government, effective five years ago, Council will eliminate 500 salaried jobs and 400 per diem jobs, mostly laborers.

A strong recommendation, it is reported, will be made by Council that a 16⅔ per cent reduction be taken by holders of positions carrying salaries established by law, including the Mayor's.

NEW JOBS TO GO

Nearly all the pay increases and new jobs created since 1926 are reported out of the new budget.

Assisting Council in its attack on "two-job" holders employed both by the city and the Board of Education, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang today said two of his men, W. C. Batchelor, chief of the Bureau of Recreation, and George W. Postgate, in charge of playgrounds, also were on the payroll of the school board. Lang's information was contained in a letter sent to Council.

Batchelor receives $3,600 from the city and $3,600 from the school board, Lang revealed. Postgate receives $2,280 from the city and $2,850 from the Board of Education.

LANG TO REPORT

Councilmen Michael Muldowney and Robert Garland collaborated on a motion to have Lang obtain the history of any agreement between the city and the school board affecting the jobs of these two men and report back to Council.

While the real work of Council in cutting the budget to stay within the tax rate of 20.6 mills on land has been going on behind the scenes a great bustle of persons trying to save their jobs and various "pet" municipal activities has been evidenced.

But unless Council acts today, there is danger of a delay in the salary and appropriation bills which may prove embarrassing.

HEROINE VISITS GIRL SHE SAVED

The girl who saved 11-year-old Dorothy McAndrews from burning to death a few days ago was discovered today to be a pretty Oliver High School freshman.

She is Laverne Hamilton, 14, of 2538 Charles street. She paid a visit to Dorothy's bedside today and was glad to learn that she was recovering and would be ready to celebrate the New Year, even if she will be in bed Christmas Day.

Laverne was returning from school Monday when she saw someone in blazing clothing running down the street and screaming, "Help!" She took off her coat, wrapped it around the burning figure and then rolled her in the snow.

When the flames were extinguished, she carried little Dorothy McAndrews to her home at 48 Harlan street. She then went on her way home. It was not known who the girl heroine was until today. Laverne takes her rescue casually, saying:

Finds Fiance Dead In Room from Fumes

Making a morning call upon her fiance today, Miss Julia Layoff, 321 Third avenue, Homestead, found him dead in his room at 320 Beech way, Homestead, according to a Coroner's report.

George Boruh, 35, had been overcome by fumes from a gas heater burning in his room, according to attaches at the Homestead Hospital.

Masefield to Visit U. S.; Won't Lecture

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Sir John Masefield, England's poet laureate, is sailing for the United States next Wednesday, it was disclosed today. He will visit New York, where he tended bar in his youth; Chicago and Montreal. He said he will not lecture.

Girl Student Beaten By Classmate Suitor

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Miss Gertrude Breckwoldt, 18-year-old high school senior, is in a hospital today with a possible fractured skull which police said was caused by a blackjack wielded by Andrew Fetterolf, 17, a classmate.

The girl was found unconscious in a snowbank last night and police said the boy admitted striking the girl because "she turned me down."

Nations Sign Truce At Pope's Request

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI obtained today a pledge of a Christmas 24-hour-armistice on the Gran Chaco battlefront from the governments of Bolivia and Paraguay.

Both agreed to Vatican proposals that hostilities cease from 10 p. m., tomorrow until 10 p. m., Sunday, in compliance with the Pope's desire that there be no fighting on Christmas.

Mild, Clear Christmas Forecast for District

Mild weather today was indicated for the Christmas holidays by United States Forecaster W. S. Brotzman as many persons were concerned over the possibility of good conditions for week-end motor journeys.

While rain is on the way for tonight, Brotzman predicted clear weather would return tomorrow. There are no high pressures reported in the Northwest to send storms for Sunday and Monday, he said. The weather map indicates mild sunshiny weather will prevail for the two-day holiday.

COUNCIL TO FIRE 900, CUT ALL SALARIES ONE-SIXTH

SEEK TO SLASH PAY OF MAYOR, OFFICIALS

Action today would mean that the bills would go to the Mayor's office for signature Tuesday, after which only three days would be available for setting up the new payroll schedule.

ALL DIRECTORS CALLED

Council shortly before noon sent for all directors of city departments for one last word before the actual budget cutting begins. Word was brought from Director of Public Safety James M. Clark's office that he was out of the city.

In sending for the directors, President of Council John S. Herron said:

"We will now ask each director what further he has to offer, and if nothing, let him walk out and immediately after noon do the rest on our responsibility."

Director Lang and St. Clair Cooper, chief clerk in the Department of Health, appearing for Dr. C. V. Maits, the director, who is ill, told Council they had nothing in addition to offer.

COUNCIL UNITED

Council has been unanimous in its determination to reduce the budget, differing only in the method.

The city detective force is almost certain to be diminished. Consolidation of police stations and fire engine companies with a reduction in force is considered a certainty.

Budget Controller Robert J. Alderdice has recommended that the following fire companies be eliminated: No. 30, 341 First avenue; No. 32, Eighth street; No. 41, Arch and Jacksonia streets; No. 48, Madison and Foreland streets, and No. 61, Commercial street, North Homestead.

The first four of these companies are at present in fire houses with other companies.

INSURANCE DATA

An opinion of George W. Booth, chief engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, sent to Council in a letter from R. J. Trimble, superintendent of the Pittsburgh office, lists four companies, which might be spared most easily.

They are: No. 2, Penn avenue and Fourteenth streets; No. 49, located near No. 48, Madison and Foreland streets, and Nos. 41 and 61, included in Alderdice's report.

Trimble in his letter stated that the insurance companies have no desire to increase rates in Allegheny County and that it is realized that city governments must economize.

DEMAND MAYVIEW CUTS

With 219 attendants actually employed at Mayview, the ratio of attendants to patients, according to H. S. Breitenstein, accountant in the office of Budget Controller Robert J. Alderdice, is one attendant to every 10 patients. This compares with a ratio of one attendant to every 17 patients at the County Home at Woodville, Breitenstein reported. Councilman Garland moved that Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare, justify the difference in ratio to Council.

Garland also said he understood that last year there was 46 married couples employed at Mayview and suggested that:

"We should 'divorce' them."

COSTS COMPARED

A report on the cost per person at Mayview and Woodville showed an advantage for the city institution. The cost per person per week at Mayview was listed at $3.46, and at Woodville $4.51.

All non-existant jobs, positions in the city payroll which have not been filled for a considerable length of time, have been eliminated on motion of Councilman M. J. Muldowney. It is believed that a number of positions in the Mayview schedule are affected.

The Better Traffic Committee has agreed to reduce the budget of the Bureau of Traffic Planning to the extent of $64,000. Council had originally asked for a cut of $73,000.

CUNNINGHAM'S DEFENSE OPENS

BUTLER, Pa., Dec. 23.—The prosecution rested today in the trial of Robert Cunningham, Pittsburgh contractor, indicted on charges of embracery and conspiracy in connection with alleged attempts to "fix" the first venire drawn for trial of Mayor Charles H. Kline and Berthram L. Succop, former Pittsburgh supplies director, last March.

Sylvester P. Mahoney, clerk in Cunningham's office, testified as the first defense witness that Roy C. Aiken, of Bakerstown, came to Cunningham's office March 2 with names of prospective jurors, but Cunningham told him he was not "interested" and to "leave him alone." He said Cunningham was at Lake George, N. Y., on February 29 and March 1, the dates on which Aiken had said he saw Cunningham in his office.

Another defendant, Charles H. Flick, of Bakerstown, indicted with Cunningham on an embracery charge, was found not guilty by a jury here yesterday, but was directed to pay the costs. W. D. McBride, of Prospect, who pleaded no defense to a similar indictment, was the principal witness in the Flick trial.

it is easy to get at her, and sometimes dangerous to attempt to kill the other man.

CHILDREN IN Sunday school are taught that our acts affect others and spread far out, like ripples on the water when a stone is thrown into a pond.

There are such ripples in the Frazier killing case. Mrs. Murrell, mother of the murdered stenographer, accompanied by the stenographer's former husband, attended the funeral.

Driving back their automobile collided with that of Martin Padgett, killing him instantly, injuring Mrs. Murrell and the former husband. Thus Mrs. Frazier's five bullets, indirectly, killed Padgett, of whom she had never heard.

committee took it up in December, 1931—that it held hearings in April, 1932—that it finually reported the bill adversely.

With the Bingham motion defeated, Robinson took the floor again to accuse the Connecticut Senator of "trying to gain some sort of a partisan advantage." He declared:

"The Senator attempted to bring up his beer bill under conditions which every one knows would render its early enactment impossible."

Robinson assailed Bingham's proposal to eliminate the revenue provisions in the House measure, declaring that "the revenue feature of this bill is most important."

HINTS AT NEW TAXES

Before the end of the short session, the Senator added, it may be found necessary to approve new taxes in addition to a beer tax.

The roll call on the Bingham bill follows:

ACQUIT SLAYER OF HUSBAND

Mrs. Irene McShane, 32, of 507 East Ohio street, was acquitted of the murder of her husband, John L. McShane, Jr., 32, by a Criminal Court jury today before Judge George V. Moore. The husband was killed in their home September 10, last.

Mrs. McShane testified she hid a pint of moonshine belonging to her husband and he struck her. She said she couldn't remember what happened after that. The husband's father testified for Mrs. McShane, saying his son was a "bad actor when drunk."

'SACK MURDER' GIRL'S FRIENDS QUESTIONED

Kidnap Note Lone Clue To Slayers; Tragedy Kept From Mother

International News Service.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Dec. 23.—Lacking the slightest trace of the whereabouts of Rose Gendler's murderers, police today turned to the friends of the pretty 22-year-old salesgirl for information which might produce a clue.

Never before in the memory of the oldest living resident has a crime so shocked the tri-city metropolitan community of Rock Island, Moline and Davenport as the barbaric slaying of this popular girl, whose crushed body, trussed in a burlap sack, was found on the ice of Rock River.

MOTHER NOT INFORMED

All inhabitants, save one, of the three neighbor-cities know that Rose Gendler is dead. The one who knows nothing of the tragedy is the girl's mother. On the verge of collapse because of her daughter's continued absence from home, the old woman was kept mercifully ignorant of the crime. Doctors said the mother might not be able to survive the shock of learning the truth.

While the murder was believed to have been committed by a ransom gang, authorities pursued every imaginable line of investigation in their efforts to solve the mystery. The girl's friends and relatives were questioned regarding her habits and her associates. Investigators sought to learn whether she might have had any enemies, but thus far failed to extract a single solid clue from a review of the victim's life.

RANSOM NOTE

A ransom note, slipped under the door of the girl's home, was closely studied. Addressed to Miss Gendler's stepfather, Jacob Mark, the note said:

"We have your Rosie and she is safe, but we want $2,000. Do not let the cops know."

It was only a few hours after Mark found the note that his stepdaughter's body, the head crushed and the mouth gagged, was discovered by two boys who chanced to pass along the Rock River Bridge.

The girl's step-brothers, Dave and Sam Mark, were questioned after it was reported they had quarreled with Rose, but they could supply no aid to the investigators and were released. A man in Davenport, whose overcoat and necktie were spotted with blood stains, was also questioned, but he proved that he had taken an injured person to a hospital.

Miss Gendler was a musician and elocutionist and a member of the Beth Israel Synagogue choir. Her friends said she never kept steady company with any man.

'Roxy' Names Leibert As Radio City Organist

JEANNE LANGE . . SHE AND LEIBERT IN THE ROXY PREMIERE

'O. K.' Wins Coveted Appointment For Pittsburgher

Richard (Dick) Leibert is the latest Pittsburgh musician to play his way to fame. This 25-year-old blond organist who started many a toe tapping to his music in the Penn Theater up to a year ago, has been made organist of Radio City Music Hall, which opens next Tuesday in New York. The $250,000 organ has been placed in his care.

It all happened when Samuel L. Rothafel—"Roxy"—said:

"O. K. You come in tomorrow."

WINS OVER OTHERS

That was when "Roxy" selected Dick at an audition in which nine other well-known organists competed for the place. "Roxy" listened to Dick play for 55 minutes, and then said "O. K."

And, what's more, Dick's going to have another Pittsburgh stage star appearing with him at the initial Radio City show, in the personable Jeanne Lange, who will be remembered for her songs and dance skits with Brooke Johns on the Stanley stage two years back.

But to get back to Dick. His comment after receiving his new appointment was:

"I kept my mouth shut because I was afraid I'd say the wrong thing. I let him do the talking. It was the realization of the dream of a lifetime. I had always wanted to play the organ in the old Roxy.

"I'm not the type who goes around with long hair and a vacant look. I like to play poker and drink beer as well as the next fellow. But I like the organ better."

HANDS INSURED

O, yes. Dick disclosed that his hands have been insured for $30,000.

Leibert pulled his first organ stop in a Washington theater when he was 15. He had been taking lessons since he was 6 and used to sit down front so he could watch the organists in the theaters.

He got acquainted with many of them, and one day his favorite asked him how he'd like to try it. That "try" started Dick on his music way to Pittsburgh and now to one of the choicest organ posts in the world.

Kiski Instructor Cleared in Death

INDIANA, Pa., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—A coroner's jury freed Arthur C. Guthrie, Indiana, an instructor at Kiski, of blame for the death of Carney Cogley, 75, who was killed by an automobile. Cogley was struck as he walked to the county home for breakfast.

Burglars Routed From Store by Bulldog

EBENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The government may have its Marines and riflemen to curb crime, but Raub brothers, of Ebensburg, will stand pat with their bulldog.

Apparently planning a fast job and quick getaway in the brothers' general store, two men broke a window and seized an alarm clock but that's as far as they got.

Premier Pays Visit To U. S. Envoy In Paris

the friendly advice of the United States through diplomatic channels regarding the pressing problem.

Some observers saw in the visit, however, a realization on the part of France that the Chamber's vote for default had cost this nation dearly.

Virtually isolated by the Chamber's action, becoming the sole large nation of Europe to default on her payment, France during the past week has been subjected to a barrage of hostile criticism which may have impelled Paul-Boncour to take his dramatic step.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(Ins.)—Premier Paul-Boncour's sudden re-opening of the Franco-American debt discussion with Ambassador Edge in Paris came as a complete surprise to the White House and State Department today.

Secretary of State Stimson's first knowledge of it was through an International News Service dispatch from Paris, telling of the 45-minute conversation at the American embassy.

Pending a report from Ambassador Edge, officials were reluctant to discuss the possibilities inherent in France's sudden decision to resume the discussions.

POLICY UNCHANGED

It can be stated, however, that there is no change in the American policy as outlined in the notes preceding December 15; that is, that France must "cure the default" of that date prior to renewed negotiations, and also that the $19,000,000 must be paid unconditionally.

In other words, no promise of joining in an international conference on debts will be made by this government to induce France to pay.

Meanwhile, President Hoover is rather nettled over what he considers President-elect Roosevelt's unwillingness to co-operate in tackling foreign problems between now and March 4, and President-elect Roosevelt is inclined to resent President Hoover's characterization of his position as being unwilling to co-operate.

Publication of the telegraphic correspondence between the President and the President-elect revealed deep and fundamental differences of opinion as to how pressing foreign problems should be met in the next 10 weeks.

"Gov. Roosevelt considers that it is undesirable for him to assent to my suggestions for co-operative action on foreign problems outlined in my recent message to Congress. I will respect his wishes."

ROOSEVELT CLAIM

Said Gov. Roosevelt:

"I am rather surprised at the White House statement . . . It is a pity not only for this country but for the solution of world problems that any statement or intimation should be given that I consider it undesirable to assent to co-operative action on foreign problems.

"I have made to the President the definite suggestion that he select his representatives to make preliminary studies. I have asked to be kept advised as to the progress of these preliminaries. I have offered to consult with the President freely between now and March 4.

"I hope that this practical program and definite offer of co-operation will be accepted."

What President Hoover wanted Gov. Roosevelt to do, and what the President-elect was unwilling to do, was to select jointly an interlocking commission to proceed at once to examination of the debt problem, to formulation of an American program for the world economic conference, and to consider American policy at the Geneva disarmament conference.

GRILL SQUIRES ON VOTE BOXES

Justices of the peace and aldermen from 12 election districts, under investigation by District Attorney Andrew T. Park, following charges made during recount of the vote that "night riders" had altered the ballots, were being questioned in Park's office today by First Assistant George F. P. Langfitt and Detective David Drexler.

Thirty-six citizens, who had petitioned for recount of the votes, were interrogated earlier in the week. Next week other witnesses are to be subpenaed and asked what they know about the allegations.

Relationships Snarled By Double Wedding

BALTIMORE, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—A double wedding occurred here last night, and today friends are wondering just how many relationships each of the principals has to the other.

Samuel I. Anderson met Miss Mary C. Pattison and later the two became engaged.

Samuel's father, Absalom Anderson, visited his son's intended wife, and met Mary's mother, Mrs. Clara V. Anderson. They became engaged.

Last night the two couples were married in a double wedding.

Whereupon, young Mrs. Anderson becomes the elder Mr. Anderson's daughter-in-law and stepdaughter in one, just as young Anderson becomes the elder Mrs. Anderson's son-in-law and stepson in one.

To go further, however, the elder Anderson becomes his son's stepfather-in-law, and the elder Mrs. Anderson, likewise, becomes her daughter's stepmother-in-law.

Baritone Says U. S. Needs Melodious R.R. Whistles

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—What the country really needs, in the opinion of Guiseppe Martino-Rossi, baritone of the Philadelphia Opera Company, is more melodious railroad whistles. Arriving here after a railroad trip, he said:

"If only the locomotive whistles were a soothing middle, rather than the rasping of a basso, off key, the entire country would benefit.

Bibles for Assembly Instead of Yule 'Loot'

HARRISBURG, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Legislators will have no "loot packages" this year, but now members each will be given a Bible.

The Board of Commissioners of Public Grounds and Buildings approved purchase of the Bibles, necessary paper stocks and other needed equipment for the legislators, but vetoed such items as fountain pens, brief cases, dictionaries, etc.

The requisitions for the so-called "loot packages" given each legislator and politician at the start of each regular session totalled $32,640 this year.

The Governor recently made public a letter to Gen. Edward Martin, state treasurer and Republican state chairman, calling attention to these proposed purchases and suggesting that it would be economical to eliminate unnecessary articles.

Martin, the Governor and Auditor General Charles A. Waters, who comprise the Board of Commissioners on Public Grounds and Buildings, yesterday refused to approve the requisitions for needless articles whose cost would have totaled $22,046.

Purchase of the Bibles was approved because the new legislators, comprising the entire membership of 208 of the House and 26 of the 50 members of the Senate, must take their oaths of office when the Legislature convenes on January 3. To save time each is furnished with a Bible for this purpose and the oath is administered en masse.

As a memento of their service in the Assembly the legislators are permitted to keep these Bibles.

FAULTY GAS JET BLAMED FOR ILLNESS OF 9 FROM FUMES

MINES BUREAU TEST REVEALS MENACE

Appliance Generates Carbon Monoxide In Home

A faulty gas appliance throwing off carbon-monoxide fumes resulted in the illness of nine persons in a Castle Shannon home a few days ago, it was announced by the United States Bureau of Mines today, on completion of laboratory tests.

L. B. Berger, chemist, who yesterday took gas samples from the home, said:

"We found that a faulty appliance was throwing off carbon-monoxide fumes, and there was insufficient draft in the flue. In the last cold spell, the gas was turned up so high there was incomplete combustion and the formation of carbon-monoxide. In some of the rooms, we learned, the doors and windows were closed tightly. It takes but 40 minutes for a concentration of fumes which proves harmful."

The persons affected by the fumes were John M. Heller, 63, 19 Pine street, Castle Shannon; his wife, Mrs. Elsie Heller, 60; their daughter, Miss Genevieve Heller, 32; Mrs. Heller's sister, Miss Esmarilla Mackey, 53; Mrs. Harry T. Foley, wife of Dr. Foley, who was nursing the sick, and Miss Alice Feehan, 19, a nurse. Miss Josephine Corbett, and a Mrs. Layton, domestics, and Mrs. Walter Smith, Heller's daughter, had been affected slightly.

Dr. Foley's belief that escaping gas was responsible for the illness caused the investigation. Inspectors of the Manufacturers' Light and Heat Company failed to find a leak. The Bureau of Mines was then called.

'PRINCE' BACK AS STOWAWAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—"Prince" Michael Romanoff, who is Harry F. Gerguson and somewhat of a pain to immigration authorities, turned up in his former New York haunts last night and the local newspapers said that he came across the ocean on the Europa.

The newspapers quoted the "prince" as saying he stowed away on the liner and walked off behind Marilyn Miller, being, of course, little noticed.

His last previous trip Americaward was on the Ile De France as a stowaway, last April. Immigration authorities had considerable difficulty holding him at Ellis Island and when they deported him back to France—despite some intimation that he originated in Peoria—it was with a sigh of great relief.

France gave him six months in the gaol, much to the "prince's" distaste, and then invited him to stay as far away from France as possible.

C., 30.34 inches) and quite low over the Canadian Northwest (Edmonton, Alta., 29.18 inches). Another disturbance appears over Southern Texas (San Antonio, 29.72 inches). Rain has fallen and continues in the lake region, the central valleys and southern plains and along the Pacific Coast. Precipitation in excess of one inch occurred in portions of Missouri, Eastern Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. It is slightly colder in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Eastern Pennsylvania and portions of the western plains, while it is warmer in the central valleys, the Canadian Northwest and the plateau district. Zero temperatures again occurred in Southern Wyoming and Northern Arizona.

River Conditions.

The Allegheny River is frozen over, ice four to six inches thick. The Monongahela is closed above Lock No. 7, with ice three to four inches thick. Below No. 7 there is some light ice running. The Pittsburgh harbor is free of ice, but the pools below Pittsburgh are frozen over, with the exception of a channel kept open by navigation. The dams are up, but will probably be lowered today, in anticipation of rain.

Irene Castle Opposes Experiments on Dogs

MRS. IRENE CASTLE M'LAUGHLIN, 'DOGS ARE CITY PROPERTY'

KINDNESS KILLS RESCUED ROBIN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—It appears now that kindness killed Cock Robin.

The chief of police at Racine, Wis., shipped a stranded robin to the chief of police here. The bird had been ill, having recovered from a blow with a stone. It was unable to migrate south with others in the fall.

It got very cold in Racine and robins were strictly out of season, so the Racine chief sent the bird South in a box.

It was put in a pen behind the police station here and the force volunteered to care for it.

Yesterday the bird turned over and died. There is some talk that it got too much food and attention.

Man Hurt in Row Over Santa's Beard

DETROIT, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—An informal discussion as to whether Santa Claus wears a flowing beard os "just a little dab of whiskers on his chin" waxed hot. Michael Murphy, who argued for long whiskers, said he got a broken leg in the fracas. Police are searching for Joseph Hinkley, who was firm for the goatee.

Listens to Lawyers Wrangle Over City Pound 'Waifs'

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin and about 40 other members of the Illinois Anti-Vivisection Society, listened yesterday to attorneys argue over whether unclaimed dogs in the city pound should be given to universities for medical experimentation.

Attorneys for the medical schools argued that "the use of animals for the purpose of dissection and vivisection is essential to the proper study of medicine." They also said the practice was an economical one for the city.

Angus Roy Shannon, attorney for Mrs. McLaughlin and the others, said giving the dogs to the schools was a violation of an ordinance prohibiting gifts of city property.

No date was set for a further hearing of the case. Mrs. McLaughlin, former dancer, now operates a haven for homeless dogs near Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to purchase, for $500,000 the Forest Telephone and Telegraph Company, operating 587 telephone stations in Clarion, Forest, Venango and Warren counties, Pennsylvania.

POEM 'THEFT' KEEPS MAN IN JAIL

Judge Refuses Plea Of Leniency After 'Confession'

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Anthony Kramer, a handyman, went to jail because he stole some silver spoons from a home in which he was employed; now, he must stay there because he "stole" a poem.

County Judge Franklin Taylor was going through his mail the other day and came across a poetic plea for clemency. It was from Kramer.

After reading the verse, the Judge exclaimed:

"Why, this man is a genius. If this man wrote this poem he should be released. I'll take steps . . . ."

KRAMER CONFESSES

And so Kramer was notified that if he would turn out another such piece of writing, just, of course, to prove he was not "faking," the Judge would secure his freedom. Kramer squirmed in his cell for a while and then called the warden. He confessed:

"I—er—I didn't actually write that poem. I just memorized it. I saw it printed in a paper a long time ago, and it seemed to fit my case."

So Kramer will have to finish his 17 months in jail.

In refusing to act, the judge exclaimed:

FRAUD DETECTED

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Even before Anthony Kramer, Brooklyn handyman serving a sentence for stealing, admitted he was not the author of a poem he submitted yesterday in application for a parole, a Louisville man had "found him out."

The poem Handyman Kramer submitted was published here yesterday. W. Douglas Dawson found the verse familiar and remembered his 1926-27 copy of "Captain Billy" Fawcett's anthology, also called "The Smokehouse Poetry Book."

There was the poem in full, on page 30, facing "The Ballad of Yukon Jake." Over it was an editor's note:

"This poem was composed by Carl Arnold, a life prisoner in the Kansas Penitentiary, and earned for him a commutation of sentence."

BETTY COMPTON RAPS SEABURY

CAP D'ANTIBES, France, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Chiding Samuel Seabury because he failed to call her to the witness stand, Betty Compton, denounced the chivalry of the Hofstadter investigating committee counsel today.

In a recent report to the committee Seabury named Miss Compton as the "unnamed person" who received money from the brokerage account of former Mayor James J. Walker. Commenting on this, the former actress said:

"When it comes to slander, he follows the old sailor's maxim: 'Women and children first.'"

DARROW'S PLEA SPARES YOUTH

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Clarence Darrow, noted lawyer, won a double victory today when the State Supreme Court not only reversed the death penalty imposed on Russell McWilliams, boy slayer, for a second time, but in remanding the case, ordered a change of venue.

The findings of the high court twice upset the decision of Judge Arthur E. Fisher. In both trials Judge Fisher sentenced the boy to death. In the second trial Judge Fisher refused the defense counsel's plea for a change of venue.

McWilliams in his first trial entered a plea of guilty to the fatal shooting of William Sayles, Rockford motorman, during a holdup on August 29, 1931. Clarence Darrow, Jane Addams and other noted persons throughout the country fought the death sentence and secured a reversal in Supreme Court.

The case was remanded to Winnebago County and retried before Judge Fisher, who upheld his original sentence.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—A former film actress, Mrs. Margaret Plato Whitaker, who had $115,000 worth of stocks when she was divorced two years ago by Francis Whitaker, Beverly Hills financier, testified in Superior Court yesterday she was "broke."

TATE PROPERTY UNDER HAMMER

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The possessions of Isley Tate, slain mountaineer, went up for auction today. Tate's goods include 21 types of firearms.

The sale, held to settle the Tate estate, is under the direction of William J. Ruble, administrator for the widow, Mrs. Nellie Mae Tate.

The mountaineer, feared throughout the district surrounding his home near Bruceton Mills, W. Va., was found dead, his pockets rifled, near Uniontown several months ago. The man's sons, Sam, 15, and George, 19, have pleaded guilty to a charge of murder. The court has their case under advisement.

THIEVES ROUTED BY SHOTS

The roar of a shotgun, punctuated by a rapid succession of pistol shots, brought residents in the vicinity of Coal street, Wilkinsburg, from their beds early today as William Henshawe, of 1609 Coal street, engaged three alleged chicken thieves in a gun battle. One of the men is believed to have been wounded.

Awakened shortly after midnight by the ringing of a burglar alarm which he had attached to his henhouse door, Henshawe looked from a bedroom window to see three men standing near the door of the chicken coop.

One bullet fired by the thieves pierced the door of a medicine chest in the Henshawe home and another struck a pillar on the porch at 1607 Coal street.

William Martz reported six chickens had been stolen in a raid on the coop in the rear of his home, 1627 Coal street.

SON OF DOOMED MOTHER TO SEE SANTA IN PEN

Warden Arranges Yule Fete for Child of Mrs. Snipes

By JOHN K. AULL
International News Service.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 23. Clyde Snipes, Jr., 5, will have his Christmas, after all — the strangest, perhaps, a child ever had.

There will be a tall Christmas tree, all bright and glittery with glowing lights and tinsel, with be-ribboned gift packages piled at its base.

And Clyde's mother will be there, too, and maybe—maybe Santa will have the roller-coaster wagon, that big red fire engine and that tricycle Clyde wants so badly.

YULE IN PRISON

Clyde Snipes, Jr., will have his Christmas, but it will be behind the high walls of the South Carolina Penitentiary where his mother, Mrs. Beatrice Ferguson Snipes, soon to bear another child, tallies the passing days that bring her closer and closer to that April morning when the law has decreed she must die in the electric chair for the slaying of a highway policeman.

Superintendent John Pearman, of the State Penitentiary, arranged today for the 5-year-old youngster to be with his mother Christmas Day.

The tree will be placed in the dormitory of the woman's building and all the colorful gifts that come to the women inmates will be piled at its base, among them the toys that Santa Claus leaves for Clyde, Jr.

WILL PLAY SANTA

Superintendent Pearman, himself, will enact the role of Santa to bring happiness to the little freckled youngster that society has orphaned.

Clyde will be brought to the penitentiary early Christmas morning, and his will be the first gifts Santa will distribute.

Tears of joy were in Mrs. Snipes' eyes when she learned her son, after all, would have his Christmas with her—a Christmas not in their home at Charlotte, N. C., with a cheery fire blazing in the grate, filled stockings on the mantel, glittering gift-laden tree in the corner, as last year. She sobbed:

"Oh, I'm so happy my boy will be with me. I'm so grateful. Thank God he can't realize where I am and what's hanging over me."

For a brief moment, Clyde, Jr., may see his father, too, on this Christmas morning. Just for a moment as the boy leaves the penitentiary he may glimpse his father who resisted an officer in the traffic quarrel on a highway in which his mother shot the policeman to death in self defense, she said. The father, in another part of the prison, is serving seven months.

Crooner Balks Tom's Christmas in Jail

Where Police Magistrate Leo Rothenberg failed, a crooner has succeeded, and Tom Henry isn't going to spend Christmas in jail after all, he told Rothenberg today in Central Police Court.

Several days ago Tom, long used to being in durance vile on Christmas Day, appeared before Rothenberg on a drunkenness charge, but the judge gave him only five days, explaining he would like to see Tom free for once on Christmas. Tom thanked the magistrate, but said that, nevertheless, he would be behind the bars Christmas morning.

Tom finished his sentence yesterday morning, and a few hours later was arrested for sitting in Ross street near the jail in the path of the central police patrol. He was brought before Rothenberg again this morning, and made this plea for freedom:

"Judge, I've always enjoyed your jail on Christmas day. I always led the boys in our Christmas carol singing. But things ain't the same. You've got a half-cracked crooner up there ruining my stuff, and I don't want to go back."

Rothenberg released Tom and 22 others charged with drunkenness with a warning to stay out of their cups and the downtown shopping district today and tomorrow.

TECHNOCRATS SEE JOB SNARL CONTINUE

(Editor's Note—Following is the third of a series of articles on technocracy, a basically new approach to governmental problems that has aroused a storm of controversy in recent weeks.)

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service Science Writer.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—"The chief product of present-day industrialism is unemployment—and this will continue to be its chief product so long as a price system of distribution is maintained."

Buttressing this contention are cold figures and scientific data of all sorts from allegedly reputable sources during the past 12 years by the band of 350 scientists who describe themselves as technocrats, in contrast to Democrats, Socialists or Communists.

The technocrats, according to the official article, claim that the "price system," "profit-taking" method of producing goods was doomed from the moment James Watts began building steam engines, which ushered in a new era of external energy production in which man and domesticated working animals ever will become more unnecessary.

MACHINE POWER

In illustration of the extent to which machine power has displaced man power, the technocrats cite employment and production figures for several basic American industries over a period of years. All this data shows that employment reached a peak many years ago, while production has steadily increased without formerly required workers.

The technocrats write:

"There is a contention that labor which is thrown out of work by the machine in one industry is able to find employment in another. But figures covering a long period of years prove beyond contradiction that this is not the case.

"The high-water mark of industrial employment in America was reached in 1918 and ever since that time, through all the great years of the boom, it has been steadily falling.

ANALYSIS OF DATA

"A cold analysis of existing data makes clear that if we allow ourselves to drift another two years in the way we have been going for the past three, we shall have some 20,000,000 unemployed."

In direct support of the title of the article, "Technology Smashes the Price System," the following data is produced:

In 1899 the flour milling industry, with 9,500 mills and 32,000 workers, produced 471,000,000 bushels of ground grain. In 1929, a total of 2,900 mills with 26,400 workers, produced 546,000,000 bushels of ground grain.

In 1900 the steel industry produced 11,000,000 metric tons of steel with 600,000,000 man-hours employment, of 70 man-hours per ton. In 1929 the industry produced 58,000,000 metric tons with only 770,000,000 man-hours, or 13 man-hours per ton.

In 1904 the automobile industry found it took 1,291 man-hours to produce an automobile. In 1929, mechanization of plants enabled the production of a car with 93 man-hours. In 1919 a total of 1,600,000 cars was produced with 606,409,000 man-hours of employment. In 1929 a total of 5,600,000 cars was produced with 84,940,000 fewer man-hours than were necessary in 1919.

'A. W.' Home

A. W. MELLON

MELLON WAITS RETIREMENT

To get a "fresh perspective on affairs in Washington" and to spend Christmas with his family, the Ambassador to England arrived aboard the Europa yesterday, insistent that it "is not appropriate for me now to discuss the war debt situation in any way."

Asked if he had any intention of resigning while in America for the holidays, Mellon said:

"I wouldn't have any reason not to go back and it is hardly within the range of possibility that I would not do so."

The former Secretary of the Treasury, saying he was "somewhat tired and anxious for a rest," said he expected to be replaced at the Court of St. James "as soon as Roosevelt is inaugurated."

H. L. WILSON, EX-ENVOY, DIES

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Henry Lane Wilson, whose service as a United States diplomatic representative in Chile, Belgium and Mexico extended over a 17-year period, died at his home here late yesterday.

The 76-year-old former ambassador, who resigned from the diplomatic service in 1913, had been ill for several years. Pneumonia was the immediate cause of death.

Appointed by President McKinley, Mr. Wilson served as United States minister to Chile from 1897 to 1905 and as minister to Belgium from 1905 to 1908. President Taft in 1909 named him to be ambassador to Mexico, where he served during four years of political upheavals that finally led to United States intervention.

He resigned his Mexican post in 1914 because of differences with the Wilson administration over the policies to be pursued there.

QUARRY KILLING RETRIAL SET

LIMA, O., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The jury which tried Loren Truesdale, 23, on a charge of killing his brother, Earl, 20, and Miss Thelma Woods, 17, was discharged late yesterday by Judge E. E. Everett after the nine men and three women failed to reach a verdict.

The jury had deliberated since 6 p. m. Tuesday, and was unofficially reported as standing 10 to 2 for conviction. Judge Everett set January 30 for a new trial. Prosecutor E. M. Botkin said he might seek a change of venue to Wapakoneta, Auglaize County.

The state charged Truesdale killed his brother because Earl "was always taking my girls." Miss Woods was killed, the prosecution said, because Loren feared she would reveal the crime. Truesdale denied the slayings.

Ringling to Sponsor Novel Farm Colony

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Announcement that John Ringling's 34,000-acre tract just south of Sarasota, Fla., will be developed into a novel agricultural colony has been made by Richard Fuchs, personal secretary to the circus man.

Fuchs said the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company would supervise the project as trustee of the property. A plan of marketing the acreage has been evolved, Fuchs said.

KENNEWICK, Wash., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Seizing a pitchfork, Mrs. F. M. Kelso, wife of a farmer, drove off an enraged bull after her husband had been knocked down and was in danger of being trampled. Kelso suffered two fractured ribs.

Husband's Suit Asks '50-50' Alimony

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Alimony should be on a 50-50 basis, when the wife earns more salary than her husband, counsel for Fred Zilinski believe.

They announced they were going to take a test case to the Illinois Supreme Court to see if it can't be arranged.

Retirement Drives Guard to Suicide

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Unable to stand inactivity after his retirement last October, Joseph Epstein, 63, a former park guard, went to his former "beat" in Fairmount Park, police said, and shot himself in the head. He died a few hours later.

Cuban Student Slain In Dynamite Raid

HAVANA, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Justo Perez, a student, was killed today when he resisted arrest after dynamite was discovered in his home, according to police. A guard, who sought to arrest Perez, was wounded.

NEWCOMERSTOWN, O., Dec. 23.—Water consumers today received gifts in the form of free water rent for the last three months of the current year. The municipal water works board told its customers that the local water works is in such good condition financially that the board can remit this quarter's rent.

Autoists Must Get Dog License First

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Dec. 23.—Unless the dogs are treated right there will be some motorists in South Dakota who won't be permitted to drive their cars.

The county treasurer's office says the law will bar motorists from purchasing their 1933 license plates if they have failed to buy licenses for their dogs in 1932.

Stage Producer Killed in New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(Universal.)—Joseph C. Smith, theatrical producer, was killed yesterday when struck by a truck in the Midtown District. Smith, who 20 years ago introduced the Apache dance in a show produced by the late Florenz Ziegfeld, was preparing for a revival of "Madame Sherry."

Furrier to Face Indictment Here

Charles Stillwell, 33, said to be a Pittsburgh furrier, has been arrested in Portland, Ore., by United States Department of Justice agents, according to an Associated Press dispatch. Stillwell is to be returned to Pittsburgh to face an indictment charging him with conspiracy, agents said.

Santa Not to Visit Stranded B.E.F. Unit

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Dec. 23.—There will be no visit from Santa Claus Christmas for the ragged remnant of the Bonus Expeditionary Force bivouaced in the ramshackle Commercial Hotel. Christmas will be just another day to the band of six men, three women and three children. The group's leader, Clarence E. Layton, of Quakertown, Pa., is in the hospital suffering from malnutrition and exposure.

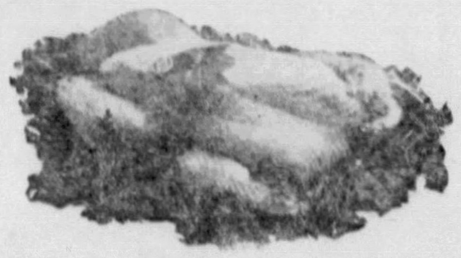
Ohio Jails First Man On New Parole Law

BARNESVILLE, O., Dec. 23.—The new Ohio law requiring termination of prisoner paroles is responsible for Ernest Capstack, 35, being back in the Ohio Penitentiary today, the first perso to be reincarcerated under the statute. Previously, a man paroled for ill health remained outside regardless of his health. Capstack, sent up for robbery, was paroled last spring because he had tuberculosis.

A Merry Christmas to Everyone!

For Christmas you'll want the most Delicious Turkey you ever Ate

FIFTH AVENUE TRADE MARK REGISTERED BRAND



TURKEY DE LUXE

These fine birds are heavily meated young stock—even better than those beautiful Fifth Avenue Turkeys sold at Thanksgiving, for these birds have had the advantage of another month of regulated feeding. Their breasts are plump—thick with white meat. Their backs rounded out with a creamy layer of fat under the skin, and for twenty-four hours before dressing they receive no food of any kind—their craws are empty—their weight is made up of meat, not corn. They are the finest turkeys money can buy—all FRESH—all freshly dressed—all dry picked.

Look for the FIFTH AVENUE Blue Ribbon Trademark Button—it is "only a button" but it represents the reputation of Donahoe's; only a few of the many thousands of turkeys shipped are good enough to earn this mark of merit, this badge of quality: FIFTH AVENUE BRAND.

How we Sell, Price and Weigh Turkeys . . .

All Donahoe turkeys are sold, priced and weighed on the "New York Style" basis. This trade term means that such a turkey has its head and feet on and is undrawn. After the turkey is weighed and priced it is drawn and the head and feet removed.

For Quicker, Better Service . . .

During the Christmas rush, in order to give you quicker and better service, we will have hundreds of turkeys ready in advance—weighed and priced on the "New York Style" basis, then fully dressed—head off, feet off, entrails out and cleaned.

No Waiting—No Delay . . .

All such turkeys will be tagged showing the weight and price before full dressing—just pick the turkey that suits you and have it wrapped—no waiting—no delay.

"TEXAS SPECIAL"

the REAL Champion

The World's Grand Champion Steer has gone—but not to the slaughter house.

Exhibited by Donahoe's for two weeks, "Texas Special" was seen and admired by over 150,000 people—by actual count. As the general sentiment seemed to be that it would be a shame to kill this gentle, noble, beautiful animal at the peak of his glorious career, Donahoe's have decided not to have "Texas Special" cut into steaks and roasts but have sent him to the Ball Hereford Farm.

In years past it has been customary to slaughter the Grand Champion for Christmas beef—after his victory—as he is not eligible to compete again.

What Is A Grand Champion?

A Grand Champion is one who has obtained the formally-acknowledged supremacy in competition; one having more importance than all others; pre-eminent, foremost, chief; the highest supreme rank over all others—for instance, there was one John L. Sullivan; one Jack Dempsey; one Gene Tunney; one Bobby Jones; one Helen Wills; one Man O'War.

"Texas Special" is a Grand Champion—THE Grand Champion Steer—he was not a carload lot champion—and no other steer in the entire world has the right to be called a Grand Champion.

"When I die I leave everything I have to my brother, Fred Scheffler."

The estate is estimated to be worth $5,000.

DO HEADACHES DRIVE YOU CRAZY?

Poisons created in your own body cause these severe headaches, and you must remove the poisons to get relief of a lasting nature.

By starting the new harmless Cream of Nujol treatment, today, you may free yourself from this constant torment.

This new form of Nujol is specially designed to rid you of poisons which very often cause this condition.

Cream of Nujol contains no drugs, and does not in any way interfere with work or play. It is delicious to take. Moreover, you can use this modern treatment at a cost of but a few cents a day.

Big Mystery Fish Infest Irish Waters

Serve Carbolic Acid With Chicago Coffee

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Mild husbands sassed their wives and growled at them. It was breakfast time on Chicago's South Side, and it was the taste in the coffee that made the husbands so annoying to their wives.

Arthur E. Gorman, water purification engineer, found the husbands were drinking crude carbolic acid. He said it got into the water probably from refuse discharged from ammonia stills of by-product coke plants.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Senator Dill (Dem.), of Washington, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today that the Radio Commission "has practically frozen" radio facilities in the country, and because of this "it is virtually impossible" to get expanded service and new stations.

His comment was made while the committee discussed a pending bill for a general revision of the radio laws, its provisions including elimination of examiners from the commission.

FATHER SLAIN BY GIRL, 15

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Refused, police said, permission to attend a Sunday school party, Frances Lassiter, 15, high school sophomore, shot and killed her father last night.

Police said they were told that the girl's father, Alexander M. Lassiter, after first refusing permission, had consented to let her go. He was shot, they said, as he searched for a door key to give his daughter.

After mother and daughter had searched for the key without success, Lassiter was said to have volunteered to aid in the hunt. As he opened a closet door, authorities related, his daughter took a revolver from the drawer of a bureau and fired.

Sentence 3 Brothers In Citizenship Hoax

Because he didn't live continuously in Pennsylvania for five years before he petitioned for final naturalization papers and because he said he had, Nazarine Acciaroli, 46, of Quincy, Mass., was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail and his naturalization certificate was ordered canceled by Federal Judge F. DOCTOR'S KISS TOLD IN COURT

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., Dec. 23.—(INS.)—"I loved my husband until the first time the doctor kissed me. I never loved my husband afterwards and I don't love him now!"

Thus did pretty Mrs. Phillip Van Hartesvelt describe in court today the beginning of an alleged two-year-love affair with Dr. William Westrate, 49-year-old physician of Holland, Mich.

She testified at the second trial of her husband's $25,000 love-theft suit against the doctor. The first trial ended in a verdict for the plaintiff, but the court set it aside. The wife, since divorced, has joined with her ex-husband in accusing the physician of making violent love to her.

The physician denies any illicit relations with her, and claims the pair have connived to ruin him.

For absolute Reliability

"Puritan" Turkey

lb. 19c

(Weighed Before Drawing)

This Christmas more than ever before the well-known slogan, for absolute reliability, stands by McCann customers. Turkey prices are the lowest most of us can remember; but at McCanns, the price in no way reflects on quality—it's a result of market conditions. When McCanns says Puritan Turkeys are the Northwest's finest birds . . . specially selected for McCanns . . . freshly dressed for Christmas . . . McCann customers from past experience know these statements are facts. McCanns invites you to buy your Christmas turkey at this year's record-breaking price under the guarantee "for absolute reliability." The purchase price will be refunded if there's any cause for dissatisfaction.

Program Pointers

Al Jolson, who recently declared he "would keep on singing old favorites all winter if the radio audience kept asking for them," sings "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" "Avalon" and "California, Here I come" by popular request as highlights of his WCAE program tonight at 10. Other selections are "Say It Isn't So" and "Pickaninnies Heaven" . . . The comedy styles of Willie and Eugene Howard and Eddie Cantor, the former presented by the Howards themselves and the latter an impersonaton by Ward Wilson, are contrasted on KDKA at 7:15.

Mr. Jolson

"Are We Coming Back to Chaperons?" is the topic of the third of a series of talks by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt during Leo Reisman's program on WCAE at 9:30 tonight.

The Sampler series on WJAS featuring Jack Denny and his orchestra with Evan Evans, baritone, to conclude this week, has been extended to include an extra program scheduled at 9 tonight.

Music appropriate to the season features Phil Spitalny's vocal-instrumental ensemble offering on KDKA at 8. Highlights are "Parade of the Toys," "Christmas Bells," "Silent Night," "March of the Kings" and "Adeste Fidelis."

Microphone antics by more than 100 persons attending KQV's staff Christmas party are to be broadcast for 30 minutes tonight beginning at 9:30. Features include Stylist Ruth Millstone's imitation of Zasu Pitts; Elmer Tuttle's impersonation of Joe Penner; an interview by John Laux, office manager who rarely visits the studios and has never been on the air, and "Jack Oyster," a dialogue by Benjamin Soby and John H. Buchhiet. Floyd Donbar lays aside his technical duties to become a jolly, plump Santa, and Prince Charming, of the Blues Chasers, acts as master of ceremonies.

"Home for Christmas," the story of the restoration of a lost child to his parents through Thurston's magic, is listed on KDKA at 8:45.

Listening In On Radio Gossip

Jesse Crawford, the organist, returns to the air for a series of Sunday night concerts over NBC-KDKA this Sunday...George Olsen, with Ethel Shutta, Fran Frey and Richard ("Hot-cha") Gardner as soloists and Gus Van as featured comedian, starts a new Saturday night series January 7 over NBC-WCAE ... Something new will be offered when D. W. Griffith, the motion picture dean, starts a Wednesday and Sunday night feature over NBC-WJZ January 4. It will be made up of dramatic episodes dealing with incidents in Griffith's career as a producer and scenes in the making of famous films.

Mr. Crawford

The "Three Public Enemies," a new comedy team soon to bow over an eastern network, is reported to be a triple-threat to the present reputations of Cantor, Pearl and the Marx Brothers.

Walter O'Keefe is said to be busy writing lines and lyrics for an original radio production in which Oscar Hammerstein is said to be interested.

Tommy McLaughlin, who sings over both networks, resembles Morton Downey . . . and Leonard Hayton, who'll replace Nat Shilkret when the new cigaret series starts, is a ringer for John Gilbert. . .

Some of the stars now appearing in vaude are Paul Tremaine and his orchestra; George Olsen, Ethel Shutta and the band; The Flying Family; Ben Bernie; Radio Rubes; Cab Calloway and the Cotton Club show; Borrah Minnevitch; Ann Lester; Donald Novis; Paul Whiteman and his orchestra; Morton Downey and Sylvia Froos. Cantor is to start his vaudeville tour next week . . .

Studio glances at NBC: A bass viol player extricating himself and his giant fiddle from an elevator doorway . . . Paul Whiteman talking earnestly with Walter Damrosch . . . Virginia Rea chatting with the Revelers . . . Phil Lord rehearsing in shirt-sleeves for his "Country Doctor" feature . . . Lowell Thomas arriving hatless for a late program . . . the Three Keys sprinting for an elevator . . . Jane Froman knitting between programs . . . Cyril Pitts, Commodores' tenor, searching the music library for new arrangements . . . East and Dumke fidgeting around waiting for their cue.

Molasses 'n' January, blackface Show Boat comedians, performed recently while under arrest. They were speeding from a theater to the studios in make up when a motor cop nabbed them and rushed them to jail. They begged and pleaded until he finally relented and took them to the studio just in time for the program—but still under arrest.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Merry Christmas, people.

They are rushing the season at Arnold, Pa. It's groundhog day, and what a sleepy lot have been uncovered by the steam shovel at the new dam. Ray Roberts writes that they don't waken for five hours and are much too sleepy to care about their shadows.

* * *

Have had four requests from persons wishing for obvious reasons to remain unknown, for suggestions about presents. We're in the same boat down here and only another day left. Wow!

* * *

Here's a toast to Mr. and Mrs. George Schlessman, of Grandview, who spent their first Christmas together 50 years ago. Their anniversary is tomorrow.

* * *

A cry for help comes from a Sheraden Globe-Trotter who has found and is caring for an enormous gray and black cat. She wouldn't mind keeping him indefinitely, but she already has a cat, and every time the newcomer meets the old established hearthside companion the fur flies. (Now look. First it was birds, then dogs, and now it's cats.)

* * *

Christmas cards are so lovely this year. They seem friendlier and more sincere, perhaps sweeter than some of the coarse jests of yesteryear. And to one whose anonymous letters usually prove a rude shock, it's beautiful to receive a Yuletide message signed, "A Listener."

* * *

Fire stations in many localities are the center of community activities. At Munhall the Franklin Volunteer Fire Company has arranged a Christmas treat for the kiddies on Saturday afternoon.

* * *

From Saltsburg comes a letter from a young widow who is an admiring fan. Married 57 years, has five children, 19 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. Her letter, written in her own hand, indicates her cheerful nature. She says:

"I live alone and do all my own work and that's not so bad for a woman 81 years old."

You bet it's not. Merry Christmas, Mrs. Hensel.

Folks Aren't Sacred Because They Are Parents

Will this world go down to wrack and ruin if anyone dares to hint that parents are not 100 per cent perfect?

That's what Thelma thinks.

According to her, we should respect them, regardless, hand them bouquets and never even whisper that mothers or fathers may be foolish, mistaken, selfish.

Do you agree with her? Or—

Dear Miss Robinson:

For many years I have been a reader of your column, and I have had reason to think over and sift your replies to so many young people and children, who belittle their homes and their parents by publicly spreading stories of their home and family relations.

These young people don't speak with respect of their parents; don't tell of the joys, but the sorrows; don't tell of the love, but the hate that they feel. I think such sons and daughters are dreadful, and I think your advice to them is equally so.

What must be the feelings of mothers and fathers, most of whom have given the best of themselves to their loved ones, to hear such besmearing, revolting criticism of parents by youngsters?

Your column fascinates our youngsters and they always get the same advice—to the dickens with your parents. So many times I have wondered—are you a mother? Have you a mother? The word seems to have no sacredness for you, and your advice to our young sons and daughters is rupturing our homes.

In the first place, any child who publicly denounces mother or father, or even a sweetheart, has little honor, decency, manhood or womanhood. Even our boys and girls of 11 or 12 years are quoting you as their authority, to rule and govern their home life.

CRITICISM DISAPPROVED

Your advice to such children causes rebellion in most cases, and if you knew the true conditions behind many of their complaints you wouldn't advise them the way you do.

No doubt, of course, some home life is bad, loveless, but your advice is entering all homes, good and bad. So be more just to parents, whose, problems are many and whose advice to their children is meant to help them.

Many parents voice my sentiments. Please publish this, so we can find out a little more about this subject. I feel that your criticisms are a challenge and break down the sacredness of parenthood. Children should be taught to respect their parents, instead of rebelling against them. THELMA.

Yes, of course they should, my dear, if the parents are really giving them a break. And I have never said that they shouldn't—a fact which you should know if you have really read this column, as you say you have.

But fathers and mothers are not sacred merely because they happen to be fathers and mothers. I know. I am a mother myself, and I know that I have often been foolish, mistaken, selfish and downright mean.

PARENTS ONLY HUMAN

The mere fact that a man and a woman have brought a child into the world doesn't endow them with supreme wisdom or perfect love. They are still only human, with the same prejudices, notions and delusions that they had before the wonder of parenthood came to them.

And plenty often they smother the youngsters, trying to squeeze them into some private pattern of their own. Often they do that with the best intentions in the world. Often they do it in a selfish effort to realize some ambition of their own that the world has stepped on.

Parents need to use sense, and judgment, and sympathy with the youngsters' own needs and desires; and if they don't, they should be criticized, like any other human being. As a parent, I back the youngster who gives that criticism, but I have never encouraged any youngster in any senseless rebellion. Youngsters need restraint, guidance, training—given with wisdom and real understanding.

To all parents who give it that way, I take off my hat in all honor.

FAY KING

By FAY KING

We have all smiled over the story of the chorus girl who would not give her friend a book "because she has a book."

But the really well read girls of the theater may be interested to know that there is a true story somewhat along that line.

In Napoleon's time a rich dandy of Paris was devoted to a stage beauty. One day he sent her a book. Without even glancing into it she tossed it aside.

One can imagine his amusement as he kept asking her how she liked it and she kept pleading lack of time to read it.

For, delighting in originality, he had had 100 crisp notes of 1,000 francs each, bound in book form for her!

Young People Promise Aid in Finding Code Book

"Nobody shall guess a thing from any word I say," Mary declared, with a justifiable little toss of her head. "Noel won't ask any questions if I tell him I can't spill any reasons for what I'm asking him. He'll just toddle along and do his stuff."

"Then go on down, dear, to the booth, quickly," I said, and Mary rushed obediently away. Lillian was already at the telephone, and in another minute I heard her say, evidently in answer to a question from Katherine:

"No, nothing that I can tell you over the telephone. But listen! Do you remember Junior and Grace Draper years ago? Well; same conditions. Everything jake so far, we have been notified. Waiting further news. But I have a vital job for you."

She waited only long enough for Katherine to utter a word or two.

"In one of my boxes upstairs in the attic there is a small book, full of notes and figures, that I need terribly. It is one of those in which I pressed maple leaves."

Katherine would know what that reference meant. I said to myself. It was a designation used among us that meant "code book."

"I'm not sure of the color," Lillian went on, but you'll know it because in the very front of it the word Momsy—yes, spelled M-o-m-s-y, not with a u—appears several times. And it's in Marion's hand writing, not mine.

DESCRIBES BOXES

"I can't tell you in which box it is, but I can tell you some of the ones you can eliminate. It isn't in any of the boxes marked 'drawings' or 'jingles' or 'professional' or 'household accounts.' It's either in the boxes marked with a big N, or the ones marked 'personal.' Better try the 'personal' ones first. Now, is Jerry Ticer available?"

She nodded, as if satisfied at Katherine's response.

"Good," she exclaimed. "Better get hold of him right away. Now in about a half hour Noel or somebody else will telephone you from Flushing. If you've found the book, wrap it securely and start Jerry off with it along the Middle Island road, finding out from Noel what's the best place for them to meet.

"Noel will bring the book back to New York, and either relay it to Mary, who is starting from here now, or bring it out here himself."

She listened to something Katherine said, and then spoke affectionately.

"Do you understand everything now? Yes, that's right. Noel to telephone you from Flushing, and you'll have Jerry Ticer arrange to meet him. Better make the rendezvous fool-proof for Jerry. Goodbye."

"I was lucky to find Noel in," she said, "and he's already left to get his car, leaving a note for his father."

"Who doubtless will leave one for him," Lillian said. "Harry expects to meet Phil a few miles from here this afternoon."

MADGE TIRED

"Then there'll be a family reunion," Mary said demurely, "because Noel declares himself in on this trouble, whatever it is. I didn't tell him a thing, but he said he knew from my voice that I was in a jam of some kind, and that he was coming straight down here after he meets me. That will mean another available car."

"I'll tell you what I want to do," I said mendaciously, "but I can't unless you'll join me. I'm simply dead on my feet, and I believe if I could get into a hot bath, then drink some hot milk and lie down afterward, I could sleep a bit. But—"

Lillian put up her hand, protesting.

"I'll do all the things you mention," she said, "except sleep. That is physically and mentally impossible. But if you'll telephone Mrs. Barnes to call us if there's anything we ought to know, I'll duplicate your program as far as I can, if that will make you feel any better."

"It will," I said, resolutely, with the remembrance upon me of a certain powerful sedative, the twin of the one we had given to Helena, which I had asked the physician to give me for possible surreptitious administration to Lillian.

Household Hints

Rub a raw potato over the aluminum griddle used for baking pancakes and the cakes will not stick.

In removing spots from clothing with gasoline a ring often forms where the spot has been. A little salt sprinkled in the gasoline will prevent this.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

To safeguard against getting ring spots on frocks by the application of perfume, use an atomizer. Don't forget that woolens and furs hold perfume longer than fabrics of light weight, so give the new scarf and muff a spraying. A sachet pad placed inside the chapeau will impart a sweet fragrance to that new coiffure you're sporting.

If you have an idea that the powder compact in your vanity case is too heavy a product for your skin, you can buy a little flat metal powder container which will hold your own powder; it sifts through a piece of metal in which are small holes. The pad serves as a means of keeping the powder from flying about when the case is opened. A cute trick!

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Taking Liberties With the Score

Just how much can be lost at the Bridge table by reckless bidding is seldom told. However, I have just received a letter from Mr. Edward W. Faith, a lawyer in Mobile, Ala., who tells the story of a rather spectacular loss in points when he and Mrs. Faith were playing a set game against two young ladies, the stakes being who should pay for the tickets to the movies. Mr. Faith was playing in the best of luck, and in the beginning of the last game of the last rubber, he and his partner were about 7,000 points ahead. With the absolute certainty of having the pleasure of making the girls pay for the movie tickets, he, as second player, picked up this hand:

♠ 852 ♡ 983 ◇ 107 ♣ 97654

One of his opponents dealt and bid one spade. With the idea of putting some excitement into what so far had been a one-sided contest, Mr. Faith bid two clubs. The other adversary doubled. Mrs. Faith and the Dealer passed, and Mr. Faith, in order to make the game a little exciting, redoubled. Feeling sure that with a leeway of 7,000 points the movie tickets were still safe, this was passed all around. Mrs. Faith seeing no danger in a loss of about 2,000 points; besides, she knew she would not have to pay for the tickets. But good luck will stand only a certain amount of liberty-taking. There are limits beyond which it is not wise to venture.

Here are the hands:
West—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

Mr. Faith
♠ 852
♡ 983
◇ 107
♣ 97654

♠ AK943 ♡ AQ2 ◇ AQ85 ♣ 8

North
West East
South

♠ J10 ♡ K76 ◇ K J4 ♣ AKQJ10

♠ Q76 ♡ J1054 ◇ 9632 ♣ 32

Mrs. Faith

East opened the Ace of clubs, and after taking five rounds, she and her partner took in the other 8 tricks, not letting their venturesome opponent take a single trick. Down 8 tricks, vulnerable, redoubled, plus 150 honors, cost North 8,950 points and more than wiped out all of the evening's gain. The girls not only did not pay for the movie tickets, but had a glorious time telling Mr. Faith how much they enjoyed the show.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Question: South bids one spade, West doubles and North passes. What is the correct response by East, holding the following hand?

♠ Q108 ♡ J7 ◇ 763 ♣ Q5432

Answer: Two clubs. A response of one notrump should not be made, because the spade holding might prove to be of no value if led through. Furthermore, the hand contains less than 1 honor-trick.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Correct Form of Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a friend who is a commissioned army officer. He also works in the same building as I do. When I see him around the building, or the city, I greet him as "Mr. Brown," but he is known throughout the city as "Capt. John Brown."

I would like to know the proper way to address a greeting card to him, and also a wedding invitation? I think I should use the title when writing the address on both the greeting card and the wedding announcement, but my friend disagrees with me, and argues that I should not use a title on a friendly greeting card, as it makes the card seem too formal. However, she thinks it is quite right to use a title on a formal wedding invitation.

Please help me solve this problem. R.

Your point of view about this form of address on the envelope is the correct one. Since your friend is a commissioned army officer with the title of Captain, this is the title that you should use when you address either an informal greeting card or a formal wedding announcement. I don't understand why your friend makes this distinction between an informal card and a formal announcement—such a distinction doesn't exist as far as the envelope is concerned.

And I wonder why you don't address him as "Capt. Brown," since everyone else does. Have you some special reason?

Out of Place

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Does the maid when working have to buy the lady of the house a Christmas present?

NELLIE.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Go to dinner and wear one of the new hats with your informal frock. A charming model that can be worn from luncheon on, is a cap of double black tulle with a petalled cuff-brim folded back against the head. It is stitched all over in silver thread.

Of course you want a coat that is different. A model to which this description applies is of hyacinth blue woolen with a bodice and the upper half of the sleeves of fine Alaska seal. There is an accompanying muff of the sealskin with shired ends of hyacinth blue velvet.

Color calls us strongly for evening wear. A new ensemble has a dress with a skirt of black crepe, a bodice of red beads massed together with an encrusted belt-band of sapphire blue beads. The jacket is entirely of red beads.

Young and lovely is an evening frock of black transparent velvet. The skirt is shirred on heavy cords which form graceful lines that slope towards the back. Youthful indeed are the quaint little puffed sleeves which are entirely of ermine bands.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Find Basic Cause of Halitosis

Advertisements in street cars, magazines and newspapers have made familiar to everyone the embarrassments of halitosis. Perhaps no one but the afflicted person truly realizes the handicap of this trouble.

Dr. Copeland

The word "halitosis" means bad breath. It is merely a symptom.

Contrary to the common belief, halitosis is not a disease of the teeth and gums. Halitosis can sometimes be traced to an infected tooth or diseased gums. But there are other causes for bad breath and many times they are overlooked by the sufferer in his eagerness for cure. Do not be misled and expect halitosis to be cured, even if it is improved, by the vigorous use of a mouth wash or toothpaste.

The presence of halitosis is a sign of a disturbance somewhere in the body. This may be in the mouth, or it may be in some distant part of the body.

Diseased and infected tonsils are a frequent cause of halitosis. When the tonsils are enlarged and pus infected, they give off a foul odor. The cure of the bad breath and other more serious symptoms is made possible by removal of the diseased tonsils.

Halitosis may be due to an obstinate catarrhal condition which must be relieved before the breath can become sweet.

I am confident that many cases of halitosis can be traced to failure of elimination and disturbed digestion. When there is any tendency to constipation, there is an accumulation of poisonous substances within the body.

Many cases of bad breath have been traced to intestinal troubles. This can be corrected by change of diet, exercise and the taking of plenty of water and fresh air. Usually there is too little "roughage" in the diet. The necessary roughage is supplied by eating plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. All food should be slowly and carefully chewed. Drink at least six to eight glasses of water daily.

In what I have said, I do not mean to imply that neglect of the teeth and gums will not cause halitosis. Decayed teeth permit the accumulation of food particles and germs. When this condition is overlooked, there is sure to be an unpleasant odor. Failure to brush the teeth and dental plate work is another factor.

Make a checkup of your teeth with an X-ray picture. Then be governed accordingly. Of course all decayed teeth should be removed or the cavities properly filled.

As you see there are many causes for halitosis. The cure is simple if the cause is known. Mouth washes and tooth pastes are of value as cleansing agents. But too much faith must not be put in these mild antiseptics.

Since halitosis may be the first sign of some serious disturbance, I am glad so much is said about this symptom. Our advertising friends are doing what is really an important thing in the way of public health education. But my plea is that the victim of halitosis shall not be satisfied merely to cover up the outward sign of some inward trouble.

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor

Is Cipher No. 30 bothering you? This man Corbett can sure figure out some hard ones.

Well, keep trying. Maybe a tip will help.

Now for the tip. Cipher No. 30 is a transposition cipher of a double nature. The keyword "Pittsburgh" was hinted yesterday. It should be easy now. Go to work and see if you can obtain the message.

Don't forget this is a message to a party in "Pittsburgh." That alone should make it interesting. Maybe it is being sent to you—maybe.

By the way, the Cipher Editor wonders how Expert Cipher Fan George R. Lang is progressing on this code.

Will the young lad in the South Hills who sent in the typewriter cipher please write and explain to the Cipher Editor just what typewriter he used. It is a very good cipher and one that the fans would like, if a standard keyboard could be used.

Miss Dorothy Brown, of 1272 Blackadore avenue, writes:

"Your original ciphers are great, but let's have some harder ones. Cipher No. 28 really had me stumped, although it was lots of fun."

The ruling said there was nothing in the law to prohibit employment of alien labor, but that the Treasury could properly accomplish its purpose by writing a clause in the contract.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Quite a stunt, at that . . . The way Radio City has decorated the rusty "L" posts near it because, perhaps, the "L" pillars "mar the scene of splendor" . . . So the pillars are painted in silver—but what to do? . . . What on earth to do with the clash of brilliance on the posts—when one sees the dirty, slushy, ugly three-day-old snow in the street? . . . Well, I'm glad I found a new pastime . . . I get my biggest wallop playing Leo Reisman's version of "Night and Day" from "Gay Divorce" . . . A barbaric rhythm—loaded with tom-tom appeal . . . Plenty pretty . . . Can't understand how come the night club canaries never sing that tune's verse, which packs the best part of the wordage . . . The interior decorating at the Richelieu is eye-filling . . . Ben Meroff's crew would arouse the lame to dance, and Grace and Charles Herber, new to me, at any rate, are clever songsters . . . A different routine—they twit the better known songs . . . And she has what was known as personality, but what I still prefer naming "terrific appeal" . . . A grand comedienne she is, too . . . Leave it to The Yacht Club Boys at the Montparnasse to supply the last line of a paragraph . . . They now warble their latest "depression" song—"Let's Put Out the Lights and Sell the Bulbs!"

Interesting item . . . About the elderly lady who arrived from Europe on a liner the other day—and a customs man took a bottle of cognac from her . . . Wonder if she was fined—as I would be—or you—if we were caught smuggling? . . . Bet he caught the devil . . . When he learned she was closely related to a powerful customs official . . . Reminds me of this news—the resignation of Burton Rascoe, author of "Titans of Literature," a best seller . . . Rascoe resigned from the Sun's book pages because Mr. Gray, of the same staff, prepared and published (on the book page) a list of book suggestions for the holidays . . . There were 17 books suggested—15 were by British authors—and only two by Yankees . . . So Rascoe, who always manages to make a connection somewhere, resigned—and explained in his note that he did so for "patriotic reasons" . . . Of course, it is the sort of controversy I dislike entering . . . But—Mr. Gray, who selected the 15 British books, is an Englishman! . . . Hmmm.

I see they deny the reports that the capture of Burns was in any way part of a publicity stunt for the "Fugitive" flicker . . . Probably it isn't . . . They were planning, however, to have Darrow defend him weeks ago when the movie opened in Atlanta, but it fell through . . . And the tale went that Burns wanted $1,000 and the promise of a sure-fire defense lawyer—to permit his arrest, etc. Glad I learned the name of the cabbie who turned over that lost purse to Evelyn Crowell . . . He is Leon Rosenberg, of the Bronx—clap hands. Dislike hearing a tale like that about anybody—I mean about that young comedian with whom I was schooled . . . He is supposed to have played the fickle fillies at a local track last Summer, where he dropped considerable gelt . . . And wound up owing the bookie $445 . . . The other day a friend met the actor, and tried to collect for the ailing bookie, who is in a desperate way . . . And the chap, whose name is spared here, offered to settle for $25 in cash! . . . No like that, at all! . . . Wonder if that's true—I mean—that if you call a man a gambler, he can sue you? . . . That is, if the man has never been arrested or convicted of gambling . . . I always play safe—and call gamblers sportsmen . . . Reminds me of a dice-juggler, who is one of the few wise men of Broadway . . . He once said: "The gambler bets—the sucker calls!"

Never can tell what will be offensive to some people . . . Take the Marx Brothers, frinstance . . . They must not call themselves Beagle, Shyster & Beagle, the attorneys, on the air, any more . . . A law firm named Beagle has threatened an action if they persist . . . So henceforth the Marxmen will be known as Flywell, Shyster & Flywell . . . Mustn't forget to toss an orchid at Commissioner Mulrooney's little boy blue, whose shield number is 1783—for the courteous and masterful manner in which he disentangles traffic at Lexington and 44th . . . Cute minor racket being worked on radio entertainers . . . Vendors of packages containing shaving cream, tooth paste, razor blades and bath soap approch the Phil Spitalnys and others of the air urging them to purchase—and add that the proceeds go to the Emergency Unemployment Committee, which they don't! The contest to select a name for Morton Downey, Jr., drew some nifties . . . The best, I thought, being "Upson Downey."

They put a swift one over a renowned star of the stage, screen and air the other day . . . A hospital got him to pose for its annual photos showing how they amuse their crippled children and how they give them costly gifts, etc. . . . The newsreels took the scene, too, but what happened was that the hosp rounded up healthy, normal neighborhood kids, bandaged them—and stuck them in wheel chairs . . . The hosp had only five ailing kids upstairs and wanted to make a sadder showing in the pictures, catch on? . . . The children were promised the gifts for obliging . . . But instead they got penny priced ballons, and the gifts were returned to the toy shop that loaned them for the event. . . . A story that demands all the scallions I have this week, however, is this one . . . On Forty-third street there is a restaurant where for a penny unemployed men can get a meal. . . . For months those unfortunates, who didn't even have the price of a meal there, would gather before the place—in the hope that a charitable passerby would hand out a dime or nickel, so that they could eat that day . . . It was a very well behaved group, too, I hear . . . But I just learned that the line isn't there any more . . . Because a club on the same street (a brotherly order, yet!) and Town Hall, where so-so musicians and good and bad singers are often heard—objected to the sight of these jobless and shabbily attired fellows . . . They said it gave their street a "bad" appearance! . . . Owwwww! Dear old Forty-third street! . . . Poor old Forty-third street! . . . With a past shadier than the Sadie Thompson character — where Herman Rosenthal was murdered by Gyp the Blood—where gambling houses and "other" houses were the feature of it—and where, at Broadway, until last year, they had a huge Christmas tree! . . . Until the company that erected it was told by the city they couldn't use the tree to advertise their product!

Storm Scenes On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The heaviest snowstorm in three years buried New York City under a mantle of white and provided spectacular pictures for the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Holiday shopping crowds are caught by the blizzard. The army of 17,000 unemployed, who receive $1,400,000 for their work, are pictured clearing off the snow. Thousands of youngsters are seen skating and sledding. The Globe Trotter tells all about it.

Prominent members of Congress discuss France's default on the war debt payment to the United States. Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, while denouncing France's attitude, believes payment will eventually be made.

Santa Claus, through Gov. Rolph, of California, gives pardons to 125 dry violators as the cancellation of the state prohibition enforcement law goes into effect.

The unusual spectacle of Jim Londos with his shoulders upon the wrestling mat, comes from Los Angeles where the champion almost lost his title to George Zaharias. First London wins a fall, then to the amazement of the crowd, Zaharias suddenly slams the Greek Hercules around the ring and pins him down.

Fifteen screen beauties are shown being selected as baby stars by members of the Wampas in Hollywood. There are talks by Mary Carlisle, an M-G-M beauty, and Eleanor Holm, of Olympic swimming fame.

Lupe to Act With Will In Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 23. Prepare for a startling announcement. The Fox Film Company has signed Lupe Velez, Mexican stick of dynamite, to appear in a picture with Will Rogers.

The news came to me from Lupe, herself, who says she is to report for work May 1, in a story that will be specially written for her and the drawling comedian.

Not only this, but Lupe has a new hobby—antiques. I found her surrounded by 11 crates of them — great bronze busts on pedestals, early French tables, ornate wall brackets, Dresden shepherdesses, candle-sticks, a huge clock, dozens of other articles which the star bought in a Boston auction.

Dressed in blue linen tennis shorts, and fired with the enthusiasm she used to reserve for fur coats, the diminutive actress had rounded up her sister, her secretary, a man friend and a laborer to aid in re-arranging her house to accommodate the new treasures.

Lupe Velez

"Aren't they beautiful!" she exclaimed, dragging me at a perilous pace through the litter of expensive bric-a-brac.

And though I could stretch out and be happy in a Grand Rapids chair, it was impossible to resist such enthusiasm. Lupe's verve and energy are a little awesome. By February 1, she will have to report in New York to go into the revue, "Strike Me Pink." She has four pictures still unreleased, and presumably might welcome a short vaction. But not Lupe.

"If I do nothing for five weeks, I go crazee!" she exclaimed.

* * *

Your busy correspondent made the rounds and wishes to report that Joan Marsh and Tommy Lee were doing very nicely the other evening at the Club Boheme. Also Lilyan Tashman and Eddie Lowe, and James Cagney and Polly Moran. A look-in on the new show at B. B. B.'s cellar also discovered Claire Windsor with Bruce Cabot, Helene Costello with Arthur Lubin and Virginia Cherrill with Cary Grant

Polly Moran

Too bad about Janet Gaynor and Lydell Peck, but they broke things without rancor, as you might expect.

Erich von Stroheim is writing a yarn, "Paprika," for Lupe Velez and another, "Poto Poto" for Anna Sten.

* * *

A short time ago, this column carried a mention that Walter Huston used to be a well known hockey player in Canada. To the papers up there who write in for details and to all you fans who will be interested, Walter takes up hockey again this week on his mountain rink. He has a cabin up near Arrowhead Lake, you know, and has contrived a rink by the simple expedient of shoveling snow off a tennis court and flooding it.

Mr. Huston

Back in the old days, Walter used to play with the St. Simon hockey team in Toronto. Later, meeting with slim stage engagements, he joined the Claremont professional team in Brooklyn. That winter he skated his way to $26 a week.

* * *

Is William Gargan embarrassed? The other day Roy Hunt, an RKO cameraman, asked the actor if he would like to talk to his parents over Hunt's amateur broadcasting station. Bill accepted, and that night, through the co-operation of another amateur station in Leonia, N. J., he talked for two hours, relating, among other things, that he and Mrs. Gargan are expecting a visit from the stork.

What was his amazement when letters began to pour in from listeners all over the country. One, a Chinese, even suggested that the baby be named Hip Sing Yip.

Slick Comedy In Fulton

By MANUEL M. GREENWALD

A very slick, perky comedy called "Me and My Gal" is nonchalantly thumbing its upturned nose at decorum down in the Fulton this week, and pleasing the patrons mightily.

It has that sweet little actress, Joan Bennett, of the sophisticated Bennetts, as a waterfront cashier and a comedienne who sets up the gags for hard-boiled Spencer Tracy, who promptly proceeds to knock them down with relish. The whole thing moves along swiftly, and its winning dialogue and execution are likely to get your vote as one of the most pleasant picture plays of recent months.

The refreshing feature about "Me and My Gal" is its comic realism and the humanly humorous tempo it maintains. Reeking with the bubbles of beer and the "howya-doin'-pal" attitude that lurks in the dirty streets near the ocean piers, this "Me and My Gal" flips you one good laugh after another with a minimum of melodrama inserted to make things legitimate as far as movie-making is concerned.

Movie Actor Takes Pen

Frank Butler, co-author of the story for "Prosperity," has joined the Paramount writing staff to work on the adaptation of the European stage play, "The Crime of the Century," in which Stuart Erwin and Wynne Gibson will have leading roles.

An Oxford graduate and veteran of five years in the World War, Butler was for six years a featured screen player, starred for three years in Hal Roach comedies, was director of many Roach comedies and writer on numerous Laurel and Hardy and Charley Chase films.

Among the many featured pictures on which he has done scenario work are "When a Feller Needs a Friend," "Untamed," "New Moon," "Just Married" and "The Big Killing." Butler also is author of a play, "The Hangman's Whip," soon to be produced on Broadway.

Christmas Week Attractions Of Screen, Stage

* * *

"Silver Dollar," in the Warner for a week, beginning today, will have a Sunday midnight show, too. Edward G. Robinson and Bebe Daniels are its stars. The first Fatty Arbuckle film in years is part of the bill.

* * *

* * *

* * *

Next week's bill in the Nixon will be "Face the Music," a musical comedy, with Mary Boland in the principal feminine role.

* * *

After tomorrow's matinee in the Pitt there'll be a party on the stage for children in the audience. Next week's comedy there will be "Twin Beds," in which Alice Ann Baker returns.

* * *

Who Invented Swatter Of Fly? Nero!

The Emperor Nero invented the fly swatter, it was discovered by research experts who dug into the history of ancient Rome for material to be used in Cecil B. DeMille's Paramount picture, "The Sign of the Cross." Noting one day the efficiency with which horses dispatched the flys which bothered them, Nero caused 1,000 tails to be separated from the horses and distributed them among the palaces of his kingdom. Replicas of these swatters were used in banquet scenes of the picture.

Broadways Of the World — All in a Day — By MARK HELLINGER

MAJESTIC HOTEL, TUNIS, NORTH AFRICA.—This was a busy day for me. In the morning I went out to see the ruins of Carthage. In the afternoon I went out to the race track to see how the ponies behave in this part of the world. At 5 o'clock I was back at the hotel in order to be present at the first tea dansant of the season.

It is now 7 o'clock and I'm trying to pound out a column. At 9 o'clock I will attempt to eat something. At 11 o'clock the guide is coming around for me and we will step out to witness the night life of Tunis. Yes, I've been busy—but I think I'll get out of this joint either tomorrow or the next day. I'm getting nervous because I don't know what to do with my spare time.

Let me review the incidents of the day. Surely there must be a column in Carthage, a foreign race course and a Tunisian tea dansant. Let us see.

Carthage. Once upon a time—which saves me the trouble of looking up the date—the largest city in the entire world. A city that was more than 25 miles in circumference, if I'm not too fresh. A city of vast wealth, beautiful architecture and undisputed splendor. A city of magnificence, pleasure, slavery and sin.

Today, to visualize what must have been, you need nothing more than a fairly good imagination. The excavations are pitifully small, but the few things that have been done are sufficient to make you marvel at the immensity of the wealth that must have been there at one time. To get the same type of thrill, just get yourself a picture of Wall Street.

Seriously, though, I did get a grand kick as I marched around and over the buried city of Carthage. Nobody knows—and the most colossal estimate may be ridiculously small—the amount of wealth that is lying but a few feet beneath the surface of the earth.

And what is being done about it? Practically nothing. Twenty-five miles of territory that holds tremendous sums—and no more than two or three city blocks excavated over a period of some 60 years.

It seems almost inconceivable, yet there it is. Fortunes but a few feet underground, and neither the Arab nor the French government doing anything about it. The thing fascinated me so much that, when I returned to the hotel, I asked one of the Arab merchants about the situation.

"Why don't they dig and keep digging?" I inquired. "Everything is there. You have a number of people here who are out of work. Why don't they keep excavating?"

"Maybe they will," the merchant replied. "Some day."

That's Africa....

Now for the races. I should have mentioned the races first and then written about Carthage.

At any rate, the ponies and the riders at the Tunic race track are just as friendly as they were in Rome. The nags run but once a w[illegible]d the entries very seldom [illegible]y. First one horse wins, and then his pal in the next stall wins.

The prizes are small. There were seven races today—and the total prize money for the 21 horses that finished first, second and third amounted to less than $2,000.

I picked out a nag named Savannah—No. 7 on the program—and slapped down a few bobs on his nose. When the horses paraded past, I say that Savannah held a colored jockey. That strengthened my hunch, and right after the start I began to root.

That's most unusual down here because nobody utters a word during the running of a race. People looked at me in amazement as I howled to suit myself. No. 7 and No. 8 were running neck and neck, and it was almost certain that one of the two would win the race.

And, by golly, Savannah won! He beat number eight by a nose in the final stride.

As soon as the prices went up, I marched to the proper mutuel window and proudly slapped down my tickets. You know the answer, I suppose. Well, it actually happened. I had used the wrong French word and purchased tickets on number eight instead of number seven, the winner. And I had been rooting for the wrong number, the wrong jockey and the wrong horse!...

Back at the hotel, I washed up and marched down to the first tea dansant of the season.

The orchestra, it goes almost without saying, was brutal. But the folks around gave me a decided kick.

I saw very few young men arrive with their own young ladies. The gentlemen generally arrived in groups of three or four and sat down to look over the territory. The young ladies, as a general rule, had their mothers with them. And at several tables their mothers and fathers.

When the music—oh, Paul and Margaret Whiteman, if you could only have heard it!—would commence for a dance, a young man would suddenly leap to his feet and race over to the girl he had picked out. He would wiggle a finger at her, and she would very promptly race to the dance floor for a turn or two.

After the dance the boy never escorted the girl back to her table. He merely nodded abruptly and turned away, leaving the girl to find her way back as best she could. Sometimes he didn't even nod. I suppose, in that case, the girl is a bad dancer.

The mothers' faces were absolute studies. When their darlings arose to dance with some mug who didn't look any too hot, they followed each move with anxious eyes and nervous gestures. But when the boy looked as though he took a bath once a month, mamma smiled happily. The fathers' expressions never varied. They were always worried.

Like the crazy guy I am, I wanted to buy one mother a drink. Her daughter was dancing all over the floor with every guy in the joint, and I thought it might make the old gal happy about her. But when I told the head waiter to serve her, he seemed shocked.

"Oh, no, sir," he murmured. "These are the best people in Tunis. Madame would consider that a flirtation."

Well, we live and learn . . .

Is There a Santa Claus?

Many years ago little Virginia O'Hanlon, of New York City, wrote to the editor of the Sun, of that City, asking if there is a Santa Claus. In accordance with custom, the Sun-Telegraph reproduces the letter and the Sun editor's answer as follows:

We take pleasure in answering at once, and thus prominently, the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of the Sun:

Dear Editor—I am eight years old and some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says, "If you see it in the Sun, it's so." Please tell me the truth. Is there a Santa Claus?

VIRGINIA O'HANLON,
115 West Ninety-fifth Street.

* * *

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except what they see. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little in this great universe of ours. Man is a mere insect, and his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, is measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of the truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life the highest beauty of joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable its existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

* * *

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would they prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine the wonders that are unseen and unseeable in the world. You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all of the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance can push aside that curtain and view a picture of supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus? Thank God, he lives and he lives forever! A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

SCHOOL BOARD GETS ECONOMY PROPOSALS

Taxpayers' Program Offered in Hopes Of Millage Cut

Suggestions for economy are being sent to the Board of Public Education prior to its meeting next Tuesday afternoon at which the possibility of reopening the 1933 tax rate will be discussed.

The Pittsburgh Real Estate Board which attended all the school budget sessions will present a list of ideas.

ECONOMY PROPOSALS

The statement of President Marcus Aaron, of the School Board, that no practical suggestions to make possible the reduction of the tax rate have been heard has surprised the realtors who had offered a program which they believe would make possible a 1-mill reduction from the present 11¾-mill rate without serious harm to the school system.

The Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League, through I. Leonard Aronson, has forwarded a list of ways and means to reduce taxes to the School Board.

'DROP TAX PENALTIES'

Aronson's suggestions include:

A higher estimate on tax collections next year and use of the $900,000 self-insurance fund if actual collections fall short.

A reduction in the expense of administration and not in teachers' salaries.

Aronson asked that the school tax rate be reduced to 9½ mills. He stated:

"There would be nothing more encouraging to the suffering property owner of Pittsburgh than an announcement to this effect."

Several suggestions from individuals have already been received by H. W. Cramblet, secretary of the Board of Education.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

This technocracy thing, we don't know if it's a disease or a theory.

Will Rogers

It may go out as fast as miniature golf courses. But people right now are in a mood to grab at anything. They are sure of one thing, and that is that the old orthodox political way of running everything has flopped. There is not a man in the whole world today that people feel actually knows what's the matter. If there was he would be appointed dictator unanimously by the whole world. Our "big men" won't admit they don't know. They just keep on hoping they can "bull" their way through. The case has simply got too big for the doctors. But the doctors haven't got big enough to admit it.

Yours, WILL.

MAGEE TO HELP IN RATE FIGHT

L. C. Clark, chairman of the Mt. Lebanon Township Commissioners, announced last night that former Mayor William A. Magee, of Pittsburgh, had been retained as special counsel for the township to appear before the January meeting of the Public Service Commission to fight rates of the South Pittsburgh Water Company.

The township has threatened to construct a municipal plant which engineers believe would pay for itself in 15 years.

Homestead Council last night decided to investigate 16 wells at the foot of McClure avenue to determine whether they could supply water to the borough. The borough officials have been considering means of getting a water supply cheaper than that obtained from Pittsburgh for 10 years. The water is bought at 16 cents a thousand gallons and retailed at 42 cents.

Samuel W. Cox, an engineer connected with the old Homestead water supply system, told Council that he believed the wells could furnish the supply.

PARTIES GIVEN 500 CHILDREN

Christmas parties were given children of the three Upper St. Clair Township schools by faculty members and the Parent-Teachers' Association yesterday and today. Approximately 500 attended.

The first party was held yesterday in the Cook Grade School, Boreland road. The children of the McMillen School, Beadling, and the Clifton School, Washington road, were feted today.

There were music, recitations and singing. And food—from soup to nuts.

The teachers prepared the food and served the children. A. F. Baker is supervising principal of the township.

RESENTED WORD REMOVED

A reference to the City Bureau of the Handicapped, the Transit Commission and the Art Commission in the report of the Citizens' Tax Committee describing the three activities as "moribund" has stirred up a storm of sufficient size to cause the committee to take the objectionable word out of the report.

The dictionary says "moribund" means "in a dying state."

Council agreed to remove the word from the committee's report after a request was made in a letter signed by W. P. Witherow, chairman.

John S. Herron, president of Council, said particular objection had been raised by George S. Davison, chairman of the Transit Commission. The purpose of the commission is to plan a subway for Pittsburgh.

TWO EXHIBITS STRESS EVOLUTION IN ART

David Blythe Works Contrasted With Today's Paintings

By PENELOPE REDD

Carnegie Institute opened yesterday, two exhibitions which will continue on view through January 31, 1933. One is devoted to the official debut of David G. Blythe (1815-1865), a painter whose life was spent in this vicinity. The second is an exhibition of 49 paintings by as many Chicago contemporary artists. Chicago art today illustrates adequately the gap between the sentiments of the fifties of the nineteenth century when Blythe painted and those of the thirties of the twentieth century.

Penelope Redd

The Chicago group runs the gamut of modern modes in painting from the Manet-Velasquez suggestion in the self-portrait by Paul Trebilcock to the Parisian surrealism in "Blues" by John Motley. This is particularly apparent because the Blythe paintings are in a gallery adjoining the Chicago group.

Blythe, above all things, was independent. His lack of technical education which his friends lamented as an obstacle to the fulfillment of his career is in modern eyes one of his assets. Whatever Blythe painted was free of the formula imposed by training in Dusseldorf or Rome, the painter's Paris-dises of that era. He was honestly American and provincial and therein lies his interest for us who see his first exhibition in 1932.

BLYTHE'S "POSTOFFICE" . . LENT BY MRS. JAMES D. HAILMAN

David Blythe, born in East Liverpool, O., in 1815, showed a natural aptitude for art. At the age of 15, he came to Pittsburgh to acquire the craft of wood carving from Joseph Woodwell. Then followed a period of sea-roving, which is not recorded in detail.

When he was 25, he was established at East Liverpool as a painter of portraits. Many of the canvases in the Carnegie exhibition are from this period. Several of them such as the "Portrait of Mrs. Jeremiah G. Webber and Her Son," compare favorably with the provincial portraits recognized as the best of the time.

When he was 30, Blythe settled at Uniontown. There he carved a walnut statue of Lafayette which still stands at the Court House. The pivotal event of Blythe's life was his meeting with his future wife, Miss Julia Keffer, in Uniontown. They were married at Pittsburgh in 1848, but Mrs. Blythe died within the year and "the beauty and the worth" was nevermore to grace his existence, according to his own words.

After that time, it is exceedingly difficult to trace his career exactly. He evidently lived in Pittsburgh most of the time after 1854. He painted pictures of incident such as "The Post Office" with the citizenry struggling for mail or "Prospecting," concerned with the oil boom.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, he attached himself to the Thirteenth Pennsylvania Regiment and made sketches of army life during the three months this unit was at the front. Blythe's death on May 15, 1865, terminated the activity of a genuinely sensitive artist who reflected the temper of his times always with humor and on occasion with fitful gleams of absolute beauty.

Fugitive From Chin Gang Shuns Debate on Beer

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

As the old lady said when she tuned out the beer debate, "I'm a fugitive from a chin gang."

The trouble with our constitution is that it is only a preamble to an amendment.

Once more we point out that repeal will do the drys good. They'll save their money. We'll spend ours.

So let's eliminate the perpetual maxillary motion and go back to the days when sawdust was a royal carpet.

Let's hitch-hike on the road to yesterday when a red nose was always shining in the window and if you didn't stagger they thought you were lame.

We're for progress, reform and the finer things of life. But we object to reforming a public that never did any wrong.

That's where the drys stubbed their brogans. We caught 'em just in time. They were about to slip over another amendment that would have made us so angelic we would have been stealing feathers out of one another's wings.

Loot Seized After Breaking of Window

Under the cover of the heavy fog early today, thieves hurled a brick through a show window of Krason Company, jewelers, of 733 East Ohio street, and escaped with watches, cigaret cases and rings valued at approximately $250.

Search for Ten Most Beautiful Words Ends

The search for the 10 most beautiful words winds up today in a blaze of something or other.

"We certainly missed you while you were sick."

The sentence, only eight words long, may be stretched to the required length by adding: "By golly!"

Mrs. John W. Jardin includes on her list "Thank you."

But perhaps all honors go to Louis W. Copits Ellwood City, for these:

EIGHT HOLDUPS STIR CITY-WIDE HUNT FOR BANDITS

4 PEDESTRIANS VICTIMS OF ROBBERS

City-wide search was being made by police today for bandits who held up four pedestrians — including two women—two chain stores and two gasoline stations last night.

A Negro held up Elizabeth Walkozic, of 356 South Graham street, and robbed her of $1.15 and a box containing a dozen handkerchiefs, valued at $3, in front of the Friendship School, Friendship avenue, police reported. The victim gave police a description of the thug.

WOMAN ROUTS THUG

Miss Helen Bigak, of 86 Hazelwood avenue, ran screaming when a man attempted to snatch her purse while she was walking in Ashton street. Frightened, the man fled.

Chester James, manager of an American Oil Company station, 217 South Highland avenue, saved the day's receipts, amounting to more than $50, when three stick-up men drove into the station last night.

The three looked like bandits to James, who discovered their car had no rear license plate as he filled the tank with gasoline. After filling the tank, James called to Hyman Ruben, another attendant, to collect the money from the "customers," and ran to a nearby garage.

When Ruben approached the car, the occupants pointed revolvers and marched him into the office and, finding no money, locked him in a washroom and fled in their car.

CHAIN STORE HOLDUP

Two bandits held up Willard Malla, manager of a chain store at Wilkins avenue and Wightman street, and escaped after rifling the cash register of $15.

Another bandit pair looted the cash register in a chain store, at 4113 Butler street, of $20 after ordering a can of milk from the clerk. When the clerk walked to the rear of the store the two men opened the register and fled with its contents.

Charles Longenecker and D. C. Wilig, attendants at the Pure Oil Company service station, Bennett street and Brushton avenue, were held up by four armed bandits who robbed them of $35. The thugs escaped in an automobile.

Overheated Flue Blamed for Fire

Fire caused damage estimated at $200 to the home of Frank Sokolosky, 1425 Forsythe street, while the family was absent today. An overheated flue caused the blaze, firemen said.

VIDOR ILLNESS DELAYS BALM

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Illness of King Vidor, motion picture director, caused the Superior Court yesterday to postpone until January 3 hearing of a $4,113-a-month alimony action instituted by his wife, Eleanor Boardman, actress. She asked the alimony pending trial of her divorce suit.

Miss Boardman's petition said she and two children, Antonio, 5, and Belinda, 2, required $1,863 monthly for clothing, food, servants and household expenses; $250 for upkeep of grounds; $1,000 for care of the children; $500 for entertainment; $250 for doctors and dentists and school expenses, and $250 for incidentals.

She said she had $48,000, and she estimated Vidor's fortune at $1,000,000, with an income of about $200,000 annually.

OFFICER GIVES CANDY GIFTS

Everybody left the Johnston School, Wilkinsburg, happy yesterday—it was the last day of school—but the children who passed by Policeman John Shipley's corner, Rebecca street and Craft avenue, wore extra broad smiles. They got candy!

Policeman Shipley was handing out his Christmas gifts, about 150 packages of sweets, to as many eager children, all of whom he could call by name.

Shipley said it was supposed to be a surprise party. But, well acquainted with his generosity, it is doubtful that any child made the mistake of taking another route home. In better times, Shipley used to give out lollipops once a month.

Shipley, who has three children of his own, was aided in distributing his donations by his wife and Miss Agnes Ford. He said:

FLIER'S ESTATE SUED BY NURSE

TAUNTON, Mass., Dec. 23.—(INS.)—A Boston nurse who claimed to be the sweetheart of Frederick Lothrop Ames, killed in an airplane crash at Randolph, November 6, has begun court action for a share in the $375,000 estate of the late society flier.

Attorney James Reardon, counsel for Miss Katherine Armstrong, filed in Probate Court an appearance against the allowance of the will. The will bequeathed most of Ames' property to his widow, Mrs. Maurice Willard Ames, and their child, Sally Blair Ames.

The will Miss Armstrong contested was executed five days before he plunged to his death with Miss Frances Burnett, Southboro society girl, and Frank P. Sproul, son of a Pittsburgh banker.

The bullet struck the challenger, John Caputo, 18, of 1201 Epiphany street, chef in the Fifth Avenue Rail, a restaurant, at 1208 Fifth avenue. Caputo is in Mercy Hospital in a serious condition.

Kilgore was arrested by Center avenue police, charged with the shooting. Also arrested were George Oliverio, 29, of 119½ Van Braahm street, manager of the restaurant; Edward Williams, 240 Flowers avenue; Louis Luconte, 22, 114 Elm street; Louis Tantali, 20, of 210 Southern avenue. They were charged with being suspicious persons.

Kilgore testified in Morals Court, where all the prisoners were held over, that the shooting was accidental.

WOMAN SAVED IN DEATH LEAP

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Dangling from the roof of the Psychopathic Hospital for 20 minutes, a woman patient thrilled a crowd of spectators and gave attendants a furious battle as they tried to rescue her today.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Miller, 44, had fled to the roof and dashed to the edge, attendants in pursuit. They grasped her wrist as she leaped, and held her determinedly despite her efforts to break free. She bit and slashed the hands of the attendants.

Firemen arrived in time to raise ladders and take the woman down.

A young woman horrified workers in a downtown office building by leaping from the seventeenth floor to the screen over an inner court at the ninth floor. Engineers had to cut the screen to remove her. She was taken to a hospital, still alive, with fractured limbs and skull.

MUSIC CLUB CHORAL

Twentieth Century Club

The Twentieth Century Club presented its choral yesterday afternoon in a Christmas program at the clubhouse. The largest audience that ever attended such a concert at this club was present, a very encouraging sign for Anna Laura Cree, the director.

Mr. Lissfelt

The program was rather unfortunate inasmuch as too many of the carols were in the same mood. When a jolly song did come it sounded trivial in such sombre company. The singers, however, were in good spirits, and the ensemble feeling is beginning to crystallize among them.

The joy of the afternoon was the singing of Christine Miller Clemson. Oh! If this lady could come a little oftener to show our other Pittsburgh singers what good singing means! It is not her gracious stage presence, believe me, but her musicianship, her exquisite sense of style, her technical assurance that sent her music straight to the heart.

Margaret Stone Klingelhofer, Caroline McKee Miller, Cynthia Calhoun and Mrs. Cree, from among the chorus, had solo parts. Helen Machette played accompaniments.

Morning Musicale

HOTEL SCHENLEY

Samuel DiPrimio, a very popular tenor of this vicinity, sang an entire recital for the Morning Musicale at Hotel Schenley yesterday and called forth abundant applause that left no doubt of his popularity.

In three operatic airs of varying difficulty he showed the possibilities of his voice for the dramatic stage and in some popular Italian songs he sang with a great deal of naive charm. But in such art songs as the gentle "Spirit Flower" of Campbell-Tipton he also showed how far he has still to go to be a first-rate recital singer.

The natural voice is as superb an organ as ever sings hereabouts, but may we sound a warning to beware of pushing that beautiful voice, for if he continues to do so, his career will be short.

U. S. LOSES 438 'MILLION-PLUS' INCOMES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The $6,500,000,000 that 1931 took out of the income of Americans reduced to 75 the number of persons whose annual inflow of money passed the $1,000,000 mark.

The peak of prosperity in 1929 saw 513 persons whose incomes ran to the seven-figure mark and beyond. Of those still in the reduced $1,000,000 income circle, only four were in the exclusive $5,000,000 or more bull's eye.

NAMES NOT GIVEN

The analysis of incomes by the Internal Revenue Bureau did not disclose the names of those recorded on this list.

In the lower income class, 260,235 persons who had filed returns in 1930 found that their incomes had declined below the point requiring them to report. More than half of those filing reports showed incomes too low to be taxable. The number paying tax was 1,455,007.

Individual taxpayers reported net incomes of $13,231,352,042, a drop of almost $4,000,000,000 below the preceding year. Corporation net incomes were $3,110,642,568, a decrease of $2,500,000,000.

The tax paid by both individuals and corporations dropped almost 50 per cent, 49.06 per cent for individuals and 46.44 for corporations.

LOSSES DECLINE

Net losses reported by corporations declined sharply in comparison with 1930, $116,406,978 in 1931 and $618,246,431 in 1930. Individuals recorded their lossses from the sale of real estate, stocks, bonds and similar transactions, at $1,043,625,622.

Contributions to charitable organizations gained deductions of $120,000,000 for persons with incomes of less than $5,000, half that amount for persons with incomes between $5,000 and $10,000, and a little more than $10,000,000 from persons in the $1,000,000-income class.

TRUCK NEEDED BY FATHER COX

Father Cox needs a small used truck and hopes that some kind friend will give him one for Christmas. He gets calls to pick up donations and it costs too much in gas to use the big truck that he owns. A small truck, no matter how old, if it still runs, will expedite his work for the needy.

He still needs food to fill his Christmas baskets and can use donations of this kind right up to Saturday night. He would like to show the Christmas spirit and put a touch of luxury in as many baskets as possible in the way of home made preserves or "what have you?" His headquarters for relief work at Old St. Patrick's is open day and night. If it is a donation big enough to pick up with a truck, telephone Grant 4390. Father Cox will send for it.

Father Cox is gratified with the response to his appeal for Christmas cards in the shape of Sun-Telegraph home delivery order blanks. Every blank printed on this page that comes in brings a liberal cash commission to his unemployment relief funds.

Kimmel, 915 Climax street, who was to appear before the Coroner. Postmaster James B. Anderson said motor restrictions prevent mail trucks from traveling more than 25 miles an hour. He said records show mail trucks are involved in fewer accidents than are trucks of any other fleet operation.

Christmas Gift Lies in Bank 11 Years

PEABODY, Kan., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—If Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Allison, of Wichita, give any more Christmas candy to bankers, they will deliver it in person. Eleven years ago they mailed a box of homemade sweets to a Peabody (Kan.) bank.

Recently while at the bank on business, Mr. Allison was told of a box that had lain in the vault since December, 1921. The cashier brought it out—and it contained the Allisons' candy.

The bank president said he thought Allison had sent the family silver, or other valuables, for safe keeping.

BOGGS & BUHL

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

"Hark, hark, the dogs do bark;
The beggars are coming to town.
Some in rags and some in tags,
And some in velvet gowns."

It describes the rag and tatter ball held by the younger set at the Edgeworth Club last night. It was a gay, informal affair, beginning with a buffet dinner, Dutch treat, the new characteristic of so many parties nowadays.

There were 265 for the buffet dinner, and many more came later for the dancing. And the costumes were splendid. The young folks, debs of this season and the past several seasons, the older school set and men of the same age, were in rags and bags and tatters and a few in quaint old gowns, treasures in many a family.

One of the most amusing costumes was that of petite Marie Louise Bickford, who, with her brief checked skirt, and be-feathered hat and suitable accessories, made one think of Jeanne Eagles in "Rain."

Amusing Costume

Laura Evans came in a bag—a burlap affair. Harriet Ramsburg wore a gown of the '90's with a huge Merry Widow hat. Katherine Collin was intriguing in a striped Jersey and canvas overalls.

The three Doyle sisters, Rebecca, Virginia and Nancy, were there, with Nancy wearing a red and white checked gingham frock. And I had a glimpse of Susan O'Neil, Madelaine Alexander, Margaret Holdship, Eleanor Jane McKennan and ever so many more than I have space to mention.

The men's costumes were ingenious, too. Some wore blue shirts with overalls or trousers all tattered and torn and caught with pins. And Charles Ramsburg, Jr., wore a wig, having a long fringe about a bald spot.

Tattered And Torn

The committee for the affair included Susan O'Neil, Katherine Collin, Peggy Griffiths, Virginia Doyle, Bertha Brooks, J. Conway Macon, Jr., Charles Ramsburg, Jr., Charles A. Woods, Jr., and Marshall Hamilton.

Goodwill Industries Holds Yule Parties

Two big Christmas parties were held, two of the 14 big events planned for this year's Christmas celebration by the Industries for more than 1,200 poor women and children. Last night the Goodwill Mothers' Club and the Goodwill Young Women's Club presented plays, and each member of both clubs received a box of candy and a useful gift. The Mothers' Club consists largely of foreign-born women who speak little English and who have families to care for. One night each week they attend a meeting of their club at the Industries, where volunteer teachers from churches of Pittsburgh and the boroughs instruct them in sewing, dressmaking, reading, writing and English. Their presentation of the Christmas play, "Follow the Gleam," last night was creditable. They had been coached by Miss Margret Vaughn and Miss Mary McCoslin, of the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church. The Goodwill Young Women's Club presented a play, "Betty Behave," which was also well done.

In the afternoon Goodwill Settlement girls, aged under 12, enjoyed a big Christmas party, playing games around the big Christmas tree and receiving gifts of candy and toys. The annual Christmas party of the Goodwill Sunday school will be held tomorrow night.

Mr. Kulick and his bride will leave on a cruise of the West Indies.

Sarah L. Gibson Makes Debut At Tea

Her parents are giving a tea for her this afternoon in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, that popular place for debutante entertainments.

Poinsettias are added to the usual Christmas decorations, giving a most exotic glamor to the affair. Mrs. Gibson and her daughter are receiving before a lovely background of poinsettias, holly and Christmas trees.

Mrs. Gibson is wearing a bronze lace gown and a small bronze maline hat, and has bronze orchids.

One of the gift bouquets brown-haired Margaret Meanor, Dr. and Mrs. Mark C. Meanor's debutante daughter, carried at her coming out tea in the Meanor home, Edgeworth, was a quaint colonial bouquet of deep pink rosebuds and lilies of the valley, dyed turquoise blue!

This pretty debutante's favorite color is yellow. Her debut gown was of creamy beige, and ever so many of her bouquets boasted yellow flowers. Her nickname, by the way, is Mugs.

The Meanors have an attractive new home in Edgsworth, in dignified Georgian style. In the tile floor of the sun room a compass is depicted, showing the interested which direction is north and which is south.

Pitt Alumnae Bridge Committee Announced

This committee includes Miss Helen Brooks, Miss Sara Jasselsan, Miss Gladys Evans, Miss Eleanor Cox, Miss Dorothy Rohland, Miss Helen Clause, Miss Nancy Lea, Miss Christine Ruoff, Miss Marian McCartney, Miss Claire Cryder, Miss Margaret Crisman, Jerry Schneider, Miss Eleanor Stuve, Miss Gladys Bowman and Miss Grace Wallinger.

Mrs. A. M. Replogle is general chairman of the bridge tea.

Two Buds Make Their Bows at Tea Dance

Quite the largest entertainments given this season, and one of the most attractive, was the tea-dance Mrs. William Reed Thompson gave yesterday afternoon in the Pittsburgh Golf Club to present her two young granddaughters, Mary Thaw Dilworth and Mary Bliss Reed.

Mary Thaw Dilworth is the daughter of the John Crossan Dilworths and Mary Bliss Reed of the Edward Bliss Reeds, of New Haven, Conn.

The club was ever so Christmasy-looking with green and silver everywhere. There was silver cloth to deck the balcony rail, silver foliage in the balcony corners, and silver balls and silver tinsel to deck the luxuriant fir trees filling the corners of the ballrooms. Firs hedged in the orchestra, and small trees decked in silver balls centered the tea tables.

And then for an exotic touch, there were hundreds and hundreds of gift bouquets, gifts to the debs and to their grandmother.

The Dilworths' debbing daughter wore peach tulle with deeper toned peach sequins as the only trimming, and her cousin was in scarlet crepe having crystal beads embroidered on the long sleeves.

Mrs. Dilworth, because of illness, was unable to assist her mother. Her daughters aiding her yesterday were Miss Dorothea Thompson, of New York; Mrs. Thomas H. Eddy, Mrs. Edward Bliss Reed, Mrs. Henry Van Cleef, of New Haven, Burd Reed, Mary Bliss Reed's oldest sister, was there, wearing ashes of rose crepe.

PARIS DESIGNERS USE FUR IN MANY NEW INTRIGUING MODELS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—There is more than one way of putting fur on a coat. This is a style principle that has been proven this year by the Paris dressmaker in the variety of costumes which have fur trimmings of an entirely new type. Fur appears on costumes where it previously has been banned; Mirande and Borea and Chanel all show blouses of smooth furs; many of the vestees under Lelong suits are of fur; Vionnet makes an entire dress in her new mid-season collection, of black fur.

* * *

BRUYERE DOES a clever job in economy as well as style in the double-duty costume pictured in today's sketch. It is a coat which gives the appearance of being fur-trimmed when it really is not—a costume which is made of two light-weight coats which, when put together, form one for cold weather.

* * *

THE GRAY squirrel jacket is the foundation. It is simply made, like a blouse, with ties that fasten the neck and the waistline, and long, semi-fitted sleeves. With a woolen skirt, it is an adequate wrap for all but the most disagreeable weather.

* * *

TOPPING THIS is a wool coat, on fitted lines, with cap sleeves. This coat, of soft, gray woolen, can also serve as a wrap when worn over a costume which has long sleeves, but the original planning placed it over the gray squirrel jacket. Both jacket and coat are in the light brownish-gray which is so popular in Paris this year.

Club in Gay Garb For Holiday Musicale

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The Twentieth Century Club is beautiful in its holiday garb. Simple and dignified decorations have given it a festive appearance and for the musicale yesterday afternoon there was an unusual note in the tea table appointments. Silky blue trees, each trimmed with a host of little silver balls stood on the tea tables and in the center of one was a beautiful silver basket holding colored Christmas balls of graduating sizes. Blue and white candles in silver candelabra added the finishing touch to the decorative scheme.

Mrs. Frank Bell, Mrs. Samuel E. Hackett, Mrs. S. L. Lang, Mrs. Frederick Edmondson, Mrs. Oliver K. Eaton and Mrs. William U. Follansbee presided at the tables.

In the lounge where the musicale was held is a tall candelabra holding red candles. Greens are everywhere and on the little outside balconies and in the big stone jars at the doors stand little evergreens.

On Christmas night a buffet dinner will be served at the clubhouse.

Mistletoe Gunning Held Wrong by Scout Leader

Gunning for mistletoe is one way of getting the popular Christmas green for parlor games and bashful swains, but it is not the Girl Scout way. Mistletoe is a parasite, says Dr. Bertha Chapman Cady, naturalist on the staff of the national Girl Scout organization, and one branch of it on a chandelier is worth several on a tree. Many collectors do shoot it down with small rifles, because it injures trees, but Dr. Cady does not advise Girl Scouts to adopt that particular method. Mistletoe is found, she says, on oak, tupelo, red maple and other trees, and is common in many parts of the country.

Girl Scouts who have won their nature badges should know how to cut Christmas greens without harming the trees, Dr. Cady says, explaining that all they need to remember is what they learned about pruning trees, and then use common sense. If they will save the berries and plant them next spring along the highways and in the parks throughout the country they will be doing much towards providing greens for future Christmas decorations.

Cabaret Supper To Be Held at Congress

Something entirely new in the way of Congress of Clubs activities has been planned by the interest group under Mrs. John H. Bricker. It's to be a cabaret supper on January 20 and will be "very splashy," according to Mrs. Bricker's own description. There will be a floor show, of course, probably recruited from the Congress School of Physical Education. One room will be used for general dancing, there will be cards in the second floor assembly room and bingo, other games and fortune telling somewhere else.

Such extra little touches as an awning across the pavement and a liveried footman will help add what Mrs. Bricker so happily calls "splash." And there are all sorts of other plans, some of them not yet mature, in the air for the event.

Phi Epsilon Sigma Dance To Be Held This Evening

The second annual homecoming dance, sponsored by the Pittsburgh chapters of Phi Epsilon Sigma fraternity, is being held in the Edgewood Country Club this evening.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Mack Standout at 70. Hogan Showdown Asked Night Ball in Majors. Holy Cross Stars Fail. Cue Tourney Features. Freund on Floor Rules.

CONNIE SEES 154 OTHER PILOTS PASS

A FIGURE IN many respects the most remarkable in baseball has completed another decade in an unparalleled career as Connie Mack today celebrates his seventieth birthday anniversary. The only man ever to be manager of a major league club at the age of three score and ten, Mack has made his reign as brilliant as it has been long. In 32 seasons as pilot of the A's he has won nine pennants and five world championships. The A's are the only club in the majors that never had a playing manager. Mack is now the only pilot in the big show wearing civilian clothes on the field.

Connie Mack

While occupying his present post, Connie has seen an army of rival managers come and go. During his long stay, the 15 other clubs in the fast set have been directed by 154 managers, 86 in the American and 88 in the National. The Giants, next low, have employed five. Pittsburgh is specially privileged to join in extending congratulations to baseball's grand old man on his birthday, as it was here that he did his last playing and also his first managing, the latter in 1895 and 1896.

OFFICIALS OF THE Braves are eager to avoid any further delay in the deal for Catcher Frank Hogan, and at the request of Manager Bill McKechnie, President Emil Fuchs has sent a letter to the New York club in an effort to close the negotiations at once.

Fuchs admits it is only natural that the Giants should try to get the utmost value for Hogan, but says they must not think they can make McKechnie give up one or more of the pitchers on whom he relies for 1933. The Braves, the Judge remarks, need those pitchers more than they need Hogan.

IT SEEMS THAT the idea of playing an occasional night game in the National League as an experiment when gates are lean has not been abandoned. The St. Louis club, at least, clings to the notion.

American League men say night baseball was not discussed at their annual meeting, nor at the joint session, but Cardinal officials indicate it was considered at the National League confab.

THE RULE BARRIER was removed a year ago by the striking out of the regulation requiring that all championship games be started not later than two hours before sunset. The situation now appears to be that if any club is willing to go to the expense of installing a lighting system, it will be privileged to play one night game a week with any visiting club that consents to such an arrangement. The Cardinal people have been talking night ball for two years, and it seems to be such a popular topic with them at present that the inference is they are planning to spring some moonlight games on the St. Louis public before the season of 1933 is over. Most of the other clubs in the senior circuit, as well as President John A. Heydler, do not favor any nocturnal ventures. They think night ball is not big league stuff.

Owen Carroll

THE VAST DIFFERENCE between college baseball and the kind played in the major leagues is shown by the failure of Holy Cross products to shine in the big show. Under the able coaching of Jack Berry, old star of the A's, the teams at Holy Cross are college standouts year after year, but in recent reasons Worcester grads have not sparkled in the pro ranks.

The signing of Rosy Ryan to pitch for Brooklyn next season draws attention again to a string of failures. Ryan, who reported to John McGraw direct from Holy Cross, was very much an in-and-outer during his six years with the Giants. Jigger Statz was a great outfielder, a wonder on ground balls, but he couldn't hit up to requirements.

ANOTHER LIKE STATZ was Walter Gautreau, a fine second baseman in spite of his small stature, but lacking the power to hit in the majors. No college pitcher ever looked greater than Owen Carroll, but he failed with the Tigers and then with the Yankees and it was not until near the end of last season that he began to find himself as a Red. Now he has been shipped to the Cards in the Bottomley deal.

Blondy Ryan, the shortstop recently obtained from Buffalo by the Giants, was dropped by the White Sox because he fell down at bat. Bots Nekola couldn't make the grade as a pitcher with the Yankees.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE world championship pocket billiard tournament just ended in New York: Ralph Greenleaf's victory was his eleventh for the same title. Greenleaf committed his first foul in 10 years. Frank Taberski made the only five-ball combination. Taberski's 19-year-old son, a student at Cornell, saw his dad play in a title tourney for the first time. Walter Franklin won $10 on a bet that he wouldn't use a bridge in the tournament. Bank shots rarely are attempted in championship play. Three cloths were used on the playing table for the 45 games. The cloth is No. 1 Simonis, a product of Belgium. The best cues are made of cypress.

BET ON JOHNNY FREUND to bob up as soon as he scents basketball in the air. The Pittsburgh pioneer in the floor sport has been looking over the situation with trained eyes and with his usual thoroughness, and he heaves a sigh at the prospect that what looks to him like a golden opportunity for pro basketball here, while hockey is on the shelf, must be allowed to go to waste.

According to the veteran, an independent pro team, no matter how strong, could not be pushed forward in this city due to the absence of worthy opposition, and the added fact that it is too costly to bring fives weekly from Philadelphia and other Eastern points.

AT THAT, FREUND expects to stage a few pro games here this season, inasmuch as the Rosenblum Celtics are again in the field to play continually on the road. The team still has Dave Banks, Dutch Dehnert, Pete Barry, Nat Hickey and Joe Lapchick, with a new man in Pat Berlihy, who is said to be the ace of centers. Herlihy is to replace the veteran Lapchick, who will fill only utility roles.

And Johnny wants it understood that his games will not be played under the new rules. He doesn't like the altered code and will give the fans a chance to judge for themselves as to which is the better system.

Johnny Freund

FREUND CANNOT IMAGINE any college player, with the possible exception of Moose Krause, of Notre Dame, or Scotty MacDougal of the Dukes, executing a real pivot play under three seconds, the time the pivot player is allowed to hold the ball. He thinks the new rules punish the better team. The real evil in basketball, as Johnny sees it, is the installation of courts that "resemble football fields in size," giving the teams an opportunity to stall. Courts of 80 feet he considers too long, and those of 60 or 65 feet, too short, the latter causing too much personal contact. The ideal court, in his opinion, is one 75x40, affording a progressive team every opportunity to combat any of the modern styles of defense. Freund believes the system of playing the man instead of the ball causes low scores and takes the action out of the games. He predicts the 10-second rule will last only one season, and says the rule makers would have done the sensible thing if they had required the defensive team to go into offensive territory after the ball and force play within 10 seconds or forfeit one point to the offensive team.

PITT HAMPERED IN PREPARING FOR TROJANS

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 23.—Coach Jock Sutherland, of the Pitt Panthers, is thinking seriously of packing up and moving his footballers across the California state line to a spot some 50 miles or so removed from Los Angeles, and there completing preparations for the Rose Bowl game January 2 with Southern California.

The snow and cold which beset the Panthers back in Pittsburgh followed them to Dallas, Tex., and while there is little snow here, it merely has changed to rain, with a chilly wind adding to the unpleasantness.

There is little possibility that Jock will make a decision within the next day or so, but it would not be surprising to find the Panthers much nearer the scene of battle by Christmas.

COLD HAMPERS DRILL

Spurred on by rather chill wind, which made loafing unpleasant, and which led a half dozen newspapermen to thank Coach Sutherland for making his initial practice here a semi-sercet one, the Panthers worked for an hour and a half on the University of Arizona field yesterday afternoon.

A morning workout was called off because of a sudden snowfall, and it was not until after lunch that Jock Sutherland called his team out for a drill.

This sudden change in the Tucson climate hasn't done the morale of the Pitt team any too much good. It has prevented strenuous drills such as the overweight Panthers sorely need.

REIDER KIDS NATIVES

Yesterday's drill was fairly secret, and the few watchers that were present were requested to leave before the Panthers went into dummy scrimmage against California plays.

Whether or not the Panthers work out early or late today, depends upon the time this famous Arizona sun makes its appearance. Upon this same factor depends the length of the Pitt stay.

Capt. Paul Reider is having a lot of fun telling the natives how much superior the climate back in New Castle is to that which he and the boys are encountering here.

Last evening the Panthers attended pictures of the Notre Dame-Southern California game at a local theater, and Bill Kerr's "Trojans" claimed that with what they learned, they will be licking the varsity inside of a week.

PITT DEFENSE RESPECTED

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Coach Howard Jones is inclined to believe the defense of the Pittsburgh football team which his Southern Californians meet at Pasadena January 2 probably is just as strong as that of the Trojans.

At least he ordered another extended workout today on offensive drill after concentrating on this part of his preparations for the game for two days.

Although the Panthers are considerably lighter on the forward wall than the Trojans, three powerful teams—Army, Notre Dame and Nebraska—worked the ball past the 10-yard line and were held for downs.

Anyway, Coach Jones has been using Homer Griffith at fullback in the secret workouts a good share of the time with the idea of strengthening Troy's touchdown punch. It doesn't mean that Griffith will start at fullback.

In fact, Homer is almost certain to begin the football festivities at quarter, going to full later when Irvine Warburton is sent into the fray. When Griffith is shifted over in favor of Warburton, Gordon Clark, the starting fullback, probably will be moved to left half, his old post, because of his blocking ability and experience.

This switching of backfield assignments means only one thing—the strengthening of the Trojan power plays, and it is quite certain that Griffith will be on hand, if possible, when the Pitt goal line looms up, in the hope of punching the ball across.

Slugger O'Doul Goes to Bat For Stowaway

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Frank J. (Lefty) O'Doul, heavy-hitting National League baseball player, "went to the bat" for a friend in court here yesterday.

The friend was William Kelly, 24, an unemployed radio man from Spokane, Wash. Broke and homesick in Honolulu, he stowed away on a liner, was discovered and put in the brig.

O'Doul obtained Kelly's release and arranged for passage to San Francisco. But on arrival of the liner here Kelly was picked up on a vagrancy charge.

O'Doul and Joseph Cohen, sportsman, appeared as character witnesses for Kelly in court and secured his release.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE MOST SACRED OBJECT IN ANCIENT GREECE—The Omphalos (Navel of Zeus), which was situated in the Holy of Holies of the Temple of Delphi, was believed to have been dropped by the infant Zeus during his air journey from the cavern of Mt. Dikto, Crete to Olympus. The relic was sternly forbidden to the vulgar gaze. Only the priestess called Pythia, who, seated upon the mystic tripod, uttered the responses of the Oracle, was permitted to feast her eyes upon it. The spot where it stood was considered the center of the universe. THE ISLE OF DEATH—The little island in the harbor of Corfu, which the Greeks called Ponticonese, is the legendary Phaesian ship on board which Ulysses traveled home. It turned to stone immediately after that homeric voyage. In modern times, the great German painter Bocklin used this island as the model for his "Isle of Death." It is now occupied by a monastery.

LOCAL SOCCER CARD FULL

By TOM BIRKS

Followers of the soccer sport have quite an attractive setup of action ahead for tomorrow, Sunday and Monday.

Tomorrow, Lawrenceville, trying to cinch the Central League title, meets Mt. Lebanon Firemen. On Monday the fans have the second annual international match, featuring American-born vs. foreign-born players.

The West Penn Football Association has worked hard on the affair. The proceeds of this game will go to the fund to bring Pittsburgh the U. S. Soccer Football Association convention in 1934, a worthy cause.

It has been 16 years since the annual convention of the governing body was held in this city. Soccer has undergone many changes since that time. The sport was in its infancy in America at that time, and the only man in Western Pennsylvania soccer still in an official capacity is W. S. Huddock, still a member of the West Penn commission and director of athletics at South Park.

Western Pennsylvania was a pioneer in soccer at that time, so it is fitting that the convention should return to the Steel City, one of the bulwarks of the soccer game.

The Central League will stage four battles tomorrow afternoon. The big crowd will trek to Leslie Park to watch Lawrenceville and the Firemen tangle. In other games, Ambridge meets the defending champions, Union Switch and Signal, at Ambridge; Clan Douglass engages McKeesport in the Tube City, and the German Sport Club takes on Westinghouse at Swissvale.

"Has Football Become a Menace to Colleges—Must It Be Abolished?"—Headline.

"Is football too much for the colleges?

"Has this $10,000,000-a-year sport developed into a Frankenstein that must be destroyed before it does irreparable damage to its creator?"

A story in a newspaper these days? No. Your guess is wrong. It's a feature story in a New York newspaper of December, 1923, nine years ago. Proving just once again that there's very little new under the sun, and that this college football problem is ever with us.

Tom Kirby, Boston heavyweight, is challenging any white heavyweight in the world . . . He doesn't want any more Negro opponents for a while, because he has boxed 21 Negroes in succession in the last three years, being unable to lure any white men into the ring with him . . . He recently defeated Unknown Winston, giving the knockout puncher a boxing lesson . . . Andy Callahan, of Boston, holds three New England ring championships, in the lightweight, welterweight and middleweight classes . . . He recently defeated Lou Brouillard and King Tut.

R. B. Drain, of Swissvale, wants to put us on the spot. . . . He writes: . . . "I have noticed in the papers that the Notre Dame coach picks Southern California to defeat Pitt in the Tournament of Roses game. . . . Also that he continues his gentle knocking of Pitt (my, how that defeat hurts!) . . . . Why not give credit where credit is due? . . . Notre Dame has had great football teams, but you cannot include its 1932 team in the list. . . . The 1932 schedule was very weak, with Haskell, Drake and Kansas, three setups . . . Carnegie Tech was not a formidable foe. . . . Navy won only two games and Army had an off day after having used its reserves in the two preceding games. . . . Southern California outclassed the South Benders . . . Summing up, Notre Dame played only three strong teams—Pitt, Army and Southern California. . . . We hear a lot about Colgate's easy schedule. . . . Should Notre Dame, on the basis of its schedule, be ranked with the outstanding teams? . . . I am awaiting your comments on the matter."

When a gent is on the spot, he looks for a way out . . . An argument is an argument, but a fight is something else again, Mawruss . . . The answer is yes, and no . . . Let's talk about Christmas and peace on earth, good will toward men . . . How does that poem go? . . . Oh, yes: "'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse." . . . Not that we're a Mickey Mouse, but then, and anyway, this football season of 1932 ought to be over and out of the way.

It is hard to suppress a smile at the action of the A. A. U. in reinstating Miss Babe Didrikson to amateur standing yesterday after she had notified that organization she was going to turn professional, being forced to do so by its action in banning her without a hearing and obstinately placing the burden of clearing herself upon the athlete instead of establishing the proof of its charges against her . . . The high-handed suspension of the popular all-round star reacted as a boomerang against the A. A. U., and

CAL, DEX GET BOWL GAME

The Cal Bolster and Dex Very households will be fatherless over New Years Day for Papa Cal and Papa Dex are going West.

The two veteran officials, both ranking high in the ranks of grid officials, have been selected to represent the East in the Pitt-Southern California game in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena. Dex will serve as umpire and Cal is to be the field judge. The trip will be the second for Very, who was referee of the Carnegie-Southern California game in 1929. Bolster never has appeared on the Coast in an official capacity.

On the occasion of the Tech-Trojan game, Very called the great Russ Saunders for intentionally grounding a forward pass, much to the amazement of the 50-odd thousand spectators. On the Coast, intentionally grounding of passes was considered a mere nothing, a trivial waste of motion and a swell way to keep the other team from tossing you for a loss.

This is the first time that two officials from the same city, and particularly, from the city boasting one of the contesting elevens, ever have been named to work in a Rose Bowl game. In 1930, and 1928, too, Judge John P. Egan, then just plain John, represented the East.

The appointments were made by Walter E. Okeson, Eastern commissioner of football officials. Cal and Dex plan to entrain for Pasadena next Monday evening. They'll stop off at the Grand Canyon on the way out, where Very hopes to recover a cane and a pair of spats he left behind on his 1929 trip.—JESS CARVER.

ZAHNISER RELEASED

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Thomas L. Turner, president of the Portland Baseball Club of the Pacific Coast League, has released Paul Zahniser, right-hand pitcher of the Beavers last year, to the Alabany, N. Y., club of the International League.

PURPLE COACH CAN HAVE JOB IN EAST

By JESS CARVER

A pretty good Christmas wager would be to lay even money that Dick Hanley will be the next football coach at Fordham. Dick can have the job if he'll accept.

Dick Hanley

The present Northwestern mentor, so this correspondent learns from an authoritative source, would like to get away from Evanston. There are various reasons. Fordham would like to have Dick come to the upper stretches of the Bronx, and a check on Jack Coffey's toll 'phone calls for the past month will show that the Fordham director of athletics has been talking with Chicago more than once.

Fordham, of all Eastern Catholic schools, has the best chance of becoming the Notre Dame of the East. The school's rating is as high as any, its tradition as far-reaching and its prospects as promising. Located in New York City, with only New York University and Columbia to compete against, the school has a swell chance to take the lead. The fortunes at N. Y. U. do not appear to be on the up-grade and the Rams, at present, are at least on a par with Columbia.

HANLEY EYEING POST

Hanley, so the story goes, is pretty well fed up with the Big Ten. It is becoming tougher and tougher to get material at Northwestern; the financial situation is not so hot, for Dyche Stadium, seating only about 36,000, is in the red to the extent of almost $500,000, and it takes a long time to get a 36,000 capacity stadium out from under a half-million dollar debt. It means that every game has to be a major one, and a major tough one.

The Fordham officials would like to have either Maj. Neyland, at Tennessee, or Hanley. For Neyland to take the job, it would mean he'd have to resign his commission in the Army, and the major, like Biff Jones, Maj. Ralph Sasse and other West Point coaches, prefers the life of a soldier to that of a football coach. You don't have to be inoculated for alumni trouble in the Army.

DICK ON FENCE

Hanley, now on the Coast with the all-Eastern team, or en route there, will divide his time between drilling the Easterners and making up his mind on whether or not to leave Northwestern. A decision will be forthcoming soon after he returns from California. The decision is expected to carry him to Gotham.

If Hanley does move to the East, Chicago will find itself with both its major coaching jobs open, as no successor has been named to Amos Alonzo Stagg at the University of Chicago. What, no coaches?

The Tipoff

The basketballers of the dear old Big Ten are not getting along as well as the rest of the country, and the Big Teamers themselves, might expect, in their preliminary tussling this winter. Of course, the Conference fives have scored more victories than they've had setbacks charged against 'em, but the record isn't the bright and shining one it has been in y'ars past.

Counting the Wisconsin-Maryland game last night, Big Ten teams to date have engaged in 32 games so far, and have won only 20. Wisconsin and Michigan, both away to sad starts, have whittled down the victory list. Wisconsin lost two games prior to last night's triumph, and Michigan so far has lost three out of four. Chicago, too, has dropped more games than it has won, losing two and winning one, and Ohio State has broken even, with one victory and one defeat.

Iowa's crack aggregation has set a merry pace for the remainder of the field with four wins and no losses. Purdue has won two games without defeat, Northwestern has copped a trio and lost one, to Notre Dame. Indiana has done as well as Minnesota and Illinois each have two verdicts in their favor and one against.

Some stars who formerly blazed among those of the first magnitude on the college gridirons will attempt to toss off a few more rays Monday afternoon in the all-star charity football game in Lincoln, Neb., between picked teams of former Cornhusker stars. In addition to the great Ed Weir, former all-America tackle star, one of the greatest tackles of all time, following are a few of the lads who have announced their intention of playing:

There is Guy Chamberlain, whose work at end on the defense and in the backfield on offense gained him recognition from Nebraska sports writers as one of the best Nebraska ever had. Roy Lyman, Nebs' tackle, now manager of a ranch in Western Nebraska's sand hills. He reports that he probably would be better handling a bottle of milk than a football, but he is willing to try. Ernie Rubka, once a crushing Nebraska fullback; Coach John (Oheppy) Rhodes, of the University of Wyoming; Edward (Blue) Howell, coach of the Pittsburg (Kan.), State Teachers, and Clair Sloan, who now is teaching at Proctorville, O.

Notre Dame will try to stretch its basketball winning string to 20 games tonight against Purdue, which it never has been able to defeat on the hardwood, although the Irish have made seven attempts. The current Notre Dame streak was started immediately after the Boilermakers won their annual clash at South Bend last season. Tonight's battle will be staged at Lafayette and either Purdue's perfect record against the Irish, or Notre Dame's string will be ruined.

Notre Dame's season record includes victories over Albion, Illinois Wesleyan and Northwestern, the latter by a 28-to-25 count, while Purdue has trounced Miami and St. Louis University.

LOMSKI IN JAIL

ABERDEEN, Wash., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Leo Lomski, of Aberdeen, a former contender for the light-heavyweight boxing championship, and a relative, George Anderson, were in jail here today, accused by Peter Hansen, Satsop farmer, of stealing a 10-gallon can of milk from his farm.

Western Pennsylvania district high school basketball teams will complete their pre-holiday campaigning with an attractive layout of contests this evening. Two members of the City League will get into the action against nearby opponents.

In what appears to be the feature contest of the card, Westinghouse will take on Johnny Reed's Scott High of North Braddock quintet, with the former W. P. I. A. L. and state champions seeking their seventh victory in a row. The other City loop quintet scheduled for action is South Hills, which meets Dormont in a neighborhood battle at Dormont.

BRIDGERS FACE FARRELL

In other tussles, Ambridge invades Farrell; Braddock and Aliquippa clash at Aliquippa in the leading out-of-town contest; Jeanette meets Monessen at Monessen; Mt. Lebanon goes to Waynesburg; Swissvale tackles East Pittsburgh, Ed Paulie and Johnny Coleman renewing their sport duel; McKeesport takes on Glassport; Munhall engages Rankin; Freedom plays at Leetsdale and Springdale goes to Etna.

Stowe hikes down the Ohio for a setto with Midland; Ellwood City and Zelienople clash; Grove City battles Butler; Burgettstown plays Claysville; Rockwood tests Mt. Pleasant, and New Brighton, Donora, Bentleyville, Sharpsville and Sandy Lake face alumni foemen.

Last night, Scott prepared for the Westinghouse contest by beating Homestead, 37 to 20, with Krull leading the attack of the victors with 11 points, scored on four field goals and a trio of fouls. Connelly took over Allegheny, 25 to 12; Allderdice won from Vocational, 39 to 21, and Perry walloped Ben Avon, 34 to 15.

CLAIRTON WINS

Out of the city, Clairton defeated Monongahela, 32 to 18; Turtle Creek won from Pitcairn, 14 to 13 in a torrid battle; Bellevue downed the Alumni, 32 to 21; Coraopolis whipped its alumni, 32 to 26; W. P. I. D. again downed Wilkinsburg, 17 to 15.

Washington stopped the victory rush of Jeannette, 22 to 20; Beaver Falls trimmed Beaver 37-17, and Central Catholic upset St. Fidelis, 25 to 24.

FOOTBALL TOPS SPORT POLL

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—With the exception of the Middle West, where baseball is considered to have best survived business conditions this year, the Associated Press poll reveals the belief that inter-collegiate football generally has suffered the least of any sport during the depression and readjustments of 1932. This may be news to many graduate managers, but the ballots are here to prove it.

Taking the country's sports expert response as a whole, football, with 65 votes, tops the list in reply to the question:

"Which sports best survived or re-acted to meet conditions?"

Baseball was named by 48 writers or editors. Golf was placed third, with 35 votes, and wrestling of the professional variety a close fourth, with 34 votes.

Except for the prominence of basketball in the Middle West and boxing, in the East only, no other sport is considered to have made any conspicuous gains or contributed any significant gestures during a year marked by heavy financial setbacks and drastic retrenchment or reorganization all along the line. As one critic pointed out:

"Football recognized the handwriting by re-scaling ticket prices, making the most of the ballyhoo for the winners and taking prompt steps to make 1933 schedules more attractive. Moreover, the spectacular features of the great college sport were demonstrated to have lost none of their appeal by sell-outs for many of the biggest games in the East and Far West."

Baseball's stronghold apparently lies in the Middle West. It led college football by 24 votes to 21 in this area as the sport which counter-acted conditions most effectively. It ranked only third in the South and East and received relatively little recognition on the Pacific Coast.

Six Games Carded For Shady Side

Six dates have been filled and one remains open on the 1933 football schedule announced for Shady Side Academy. November 11 is open for a game at home. The card follows:

November 11—Open.

Vindicated, Stays Pro

BABE DIDRIKSON, GREATEST ATHLETE, WINS BATTLE

The "pardon" came too late for Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, Texas' one-girl athletic team, who will go into movies and give exhibitions of her athletic prowess all over the country and clean up financially as a result of the hasty action of the A. A. U. in barring her recently. As a result of the attendant publicity, she received a number of offers and decided to become a real professional. When the A. A. U. heard about that, it reinstated her, but too late to keep her within its ranks. International News Photo Service pictures above show the girl wonder in repose and (below) setting a new world record in the recent Olympic Games hurdles.

BABE TO STAY PRO, SHE SAYS

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Mildred (Babe) Didrikson announced here today that the reinstatement action of the Southern A. A. U. will not affect her decision to turn professional. In a statement issued to the press as she boarded a Chicago-bound train she said:

"I do not in the least regret the decision I have made."

Miss Didrikson refused to tell her destination, and, in reply to questions, merely repeated:

"I am going West."

She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Esther Didrikson. Miss Didrikson's statement follows:

"I saw the announcement of my reinstatement by the registration committee of the Southern A. A. U. in a newspaper while changing trains for the West here this morning. I am, naturally, very pleased. But I do not in the least regret the decision I have made. The A. A. U.'s belated action in whitewashing me will not in any particular affect the plans I have already made—and my decision respecting my acceptance or otherwise of additional arrangements which are nearing maturity.

"Not until this last week-end did I realize what a terrifying business it is to maintain oneself as a member in good standing in the A. A. U. Being an athlete and being a member of the A. A. U. are two quite different things. I'm not sure which is the most difficult. This realization came with my reading, for the first time, during this last week-end, of part of the A. A. U. book of rules. I am amazed to discover that there are some 350 pages of regulations and do's and don'ts. What a wonder it is that nothing ever happened before—and that anyone can continue to be all square with the A. A. U. I'm afraid I never could memorize all those rules. I'd rather try to smash another world record for something.

"So it's probably just as well that everything has happened just as it has. I know I'm perfectly satisfied."

Police Aid Needed At Fairmont Fight

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—In a fight which all but ended in a free-for-all, Buddy McArthur, 185, Fairmont, won over Dick Powell, 223, Clarksburg, on a foul for butting in the fourth round of a scheduled eight-round go here last night.

Powell, battered and bruised by his lighter opponent, became infuriated and was butting McArthur all over the ring when Referee Jesse Morris, with the assistance of police, finally stopped the melee and awarded the bout to McArthur.

The Ohioans tallied five field goals to four for the Vanities. Mae Robinson, former Aliquippa High School star, again led the Vanities' attack with six points.

In other independent games last night, the J. P. Rooneys were defeated by the Akron Firestones, 40 to 33. Cunningham and Chadwick, Akron stars, each tallied 11 points. O'Hara and Eddie Baker led the Rooneys with seven each.

the attendant publicity flooded her with legitimate offers to capitalize upon her athletic fame. . . . Feeling that she might as well "play the game as have the name," Babe notified the officials that she would not bother to carry on the hopeless and ridiculous fight to clear herself in the face of the stone wall stand of the authorities, announced her plans for a financial cleanup and threw consternation into the ranks of the men who had messed up the affair, whereupon they immediately pronounced her reinstatement as an amateur.

GOOSBY BOXES K. O. ROBERTS AT ARENA

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The Disappointed Man of the local boxing arenas goes to the post again tonight in the 10-round main bout at the Arena, on the North Side. He's Frankie Goosby, Negro welter-middleweight.

Goosby has been around here for many months and has proved his ability, but he hasn't been able to cash in on it. He runs into one cancellation or substitution after another. Tonight, for the second time, Dave Shade, California veteran, has pulled out on him, first because of a bum toe and this time because of lumbago, which is a pain in the back any time, and so Goosby is in there instead with a lollapalooza of a puncher in Johnny (K. O.) Roberts, of Huntington, W. Va.

Goosby is a puncher himself, wherefore business in the socking line may be good either way. If it's out and out punching you crave, this may be just the fight you've been looking for around the corner.

EDGE FOR ROBERTS

Roberts, who fights 'em from welterweights up to heavyweights, will come in at 165 pounds, at which notch he probably will have an edge of 10 pounds on his opponent.

Charley Baxter boxes Eddie Hebner in the eight-round semi-final. Eddie Zivic and Jackie Coogan trade wallops in the second bout and Johnny Durso and Georgie Schlee box a return go in the opener.

It seems this fellow Alabama Kid, Negro middleweight, of Dover, O., who has caused a squabble over his services, with both local clubs claiming him for a return bout with Jimmy Belmont, whom he stopped technically in six rounds at Dover last week, is a victim of too many managers or assistant managers, who have been going around soliciting business for him. Motor Square Garden has his real manager's acceptance for an eight-round semi-final with Belmont on its Gorilla Jones-Tommy Freeman card, Christmas afternoon, while it seems the Arena, in arranging to have him box Belmont in a windup next Friday night, was left out on a limb because it dealt through one of the carbon copy managers. Duplicates don't count in this case.

COLD HITS BELMONT

Now that the Garden is set with the match, maybe it isn't, after all. Belmont is suffering from a cold and it is feared it is a touch of flu, which may prevent him from going through with the bout. In which case, Matchmaker Jules Beck will quit worrying and throw in the Alabama Kid with Lew Raymond's relations, and let it go at that.

Joey Speigal and Jacquette Elverillo will box the second bout.

George Rocco, of Ellwood City, a brother of Emmett Rocco, the heavyweight, who now is boxing in California, will appear in an amateur bout at Farrell, Pa., next Thursday night. He is a welterweight.

CUE CHAMPION UNDEFEATED

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Undefeated in 20 consecutive championship games over a span of two years, Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, stood today the unchallenged king of the nation's pocket billiard players.

Greenleaf brushed aside Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, 125 to 22, last night to finish the 1932 championship tournament with nine successive victories and retain the title he won last year with a clean sweep of 11 games.

Rudolph, who defeated Greenleaf in the deciding game of the 1930 championship, never had a chance last night. The champion pulled into an early lead and finally ended the match with successive runs of 21, 34 and 44 in the ninth, tenth and eleventh innings.

Not only did Greenleaf defeat every one of his nine rivals in the current tournamenvt but he did so without being seriously threatened at any time. The closest any rival got to the champion was the 125-78 score to which Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago, held him on Wednesday.

Rudolph's defeat dropped the Clevelander into a tie for second place with young Jimmy Caras, of Wilmington, Del., and Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia. This trio was to play off for that position today.

Army Sets '33 Football Schedule

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Army's complete 1933 football schedule, listing 10 games, has been announced by Maj. P. B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics.

The schedule is one of the heaviest ever undertaken by any Army team, including five major games against Illinois, Yale, Harvard, Navy and Notre Dame. The schedule, however, is so lined up as to make it unnecessary for Lieut. Gar Davidson's first cadet eleven to play more than two major opponents on successive Saturdays.

By mutual agreement among athletic officials of Army and Illinois it was decided to hold the Army-Illinois game in the new Municipal Stadium at Cleveland, October 21.

GENE TUNNEY TELLS STORY OF LIFE

By GENE TUNNEY
Retired Heavyweight Champion

Gene Tunney

SYNOPSIS

Thus far, the author has described his strenuous boyhood, New York fight club activities, and battles paving the way toward the A. E. F. ring championship in France . . . Office boy, ship company rate clerk, life saver, and now a full-fledged U. S. Marine, Tunney travels to Paris for "fame and glory" . . . winning the light-heavy title on April 26, 1919 . . . Decides to defeat Dempsey some day! . . . Smiles . . . laughs . . . Gene returns to the U. S., is discharged and, "broke," resumes training, retaining Billy Roche as his manager when Sammy Kelly leaves for Havana. During winter of 1919-20 Tunney fought Dan O'Dowd a hard no-decision bout and knocked out Bob Pierce, Whitey Allen, Al Roberts and K. O. Sullivan.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

In the early spring of 1920, Sammy Kelly returned from Havana and, finding that I had become fairly well established, naturally wanted to resume his managerial interests in me. I did not think this quite fair to Billy Roche and, on telling him so, Sammy agreed to become jointly interested with Billy Roche in the management of my affairs. I thought this a very fair proposition and took it to Billy. Much to my surprise, Billy turned it down, saying that he woud not share with anyone in the management of a fighter.

He said:

"Gene, I do not do things that way. I either take full charge of the management of the fighter or not at all. I understand your agreement with Kelly; you must go back with him. I expect to go into a partnership with a friend and open a theatrical booking agency; this will keep me busier than I want to be. Good luck to you!"

Billy and I have been friends since.

Shortly after Sammy again took up the job of managing my pugilistic affairs, I realized he had too many other interests to look after me properly. He had many irons in the fire besides his steady employment with Charles A. Stoneham & Company and his race-track interests. We talked the thing over, and, upon my showing Sammy that his many important interests would conflict with his duty toward me, he agreed to turn me over to whatever manager I named.

JOINS DOC BAGLEY

Upon leaving him, I thought over the various managers I knew, and would have decided on Frank (Doc) Bagley immediately had I not remembered the incident of his demonstration of patriotism when he agreed to change his cut from 33⅓ to 25 per cent the night before I left for service and, incidentally, kept the $2.50. As a matter of fact, there would have been no hesitancy whatever about my going back with Bagley on my return from France had I been able to forget this incident. Had I done so, I undoubtedly would have been saved many unhappy moments while looking for a fight during those first few months after my discharge.

However, I had watched Bagley in the meantime, and believed he was competent and accordingly made excuses for his exhibition of "patriotism." I believe Bagley to be the outstanding manager of my acquaintance. I had a personal liking for him, and decided to go up to Harlem to see him. Upon my stating my case, Bagley expressed his willingness to handle my affairs for 25 per cent. Accordingly, a verbal contract was agreed upon.

The following day, Sammy Kelly called me on the telephone to tell me he had reconsidered the matter and would like me to go along with him under the old agreement, which had been verbal. I informed him of the new agreement entered into with Bagley, and said I did not believe I could do anything about it as my word had been given. Kelly engaged Charles A. Stoneham's lawyer, who sent me a letter threatening me with action for breach of contract.

BOTHERED BY KNUCKLE

This made me quite angry and unfortunately I wrote Sammy a rather sharp letter. I heard no more from the lawyer. Sammy developed an imaginary grievance. I do not believe he ever forgave me. Despite our misunderstanding, I always had a great affection for Sammy Kelly and admired and respected him.

Doc Bagley got busy immediately and in a month's time I had engaged in three matches. Things went along very well until my hands began to crack up. The old damage to the middle knuckle of my right hand that I had received in France reappeared. I was entering matches now with a terrific handicap; my punch was leaving me. I was no longer able to hit with reckless abandon. I had to think of my hands and cautiously pick my spots. Many of my admirers began to lose confidence in me. The boxing writers were commenting on my reversal of form.

TAKES RING LAYOFF

Finally—in a contest against Leo Houck in the Jersey City armory—in addition to increasing the injury to my right hand, I broke my left thumb as Houck blocked with an elbow a blow aimed at his body. Here I was in the fourth round of a 10-round bout, with both hands practically useless. By luck, I happened to hit Houck on the temple with my right, putting him down for a nine count in the ninth round. I could not use either hand after this. In the tenth round of that match, I realized that I had gone away back in my fighting form. I knew the cause. I had a clear demonstration of the old axiom:

I had been considering going to a lumber camp. Now I was determined to do so.

I left the ring amidst the jeers and hoots of the spectators, depressed about my showing, but determined never to fight again until I was fit. When my fractured hand permitted, I left for Algonquin Park, Ont., to join a lumber company there. I tramped through the woods, swung an ax, ate the food cooked over an open fire, and did exactly what each member of the camp was required to do. We got up at 5 o'clock every morning, had breakfast, awaited dawn. Then out on the snowy trail we went with axes and saws so that we would be at our jobs when there was sufficient daylight to cut timber. I remained at this camp until it broke up in the spring.

WORKS AS LABORER

Upon returning to New York, I was convinced that my hands had not had sufficient work, so by arrangement through a friend I went up to Poland Spring, Me., to work as a laborer. I remained here until the latter part of June, 1921.

Jim Bryan, who was instrumental in my going up to Poland Spring, was one of the soldiers whom I had met in 1917 while working for the J. G. White Engineering Corporation at Erie Pier No. 2. Jim has been an immeasurable influence in my life. His friendship has been dependable and steadfast. His is the enthusiastic quality of spirit and nature that is very rare.

When I returned to New York from Poland Spring, I saw Jim and confided to him that, though I was not yet quite sure whether my hands would stand the strain of fighting, I had decided to leave Poland because I had become very slow from the heavy work I was required to do. Shoveling coal occasionally from 7 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. was part of the work.

RETURNS TO ACTION

Jim offered to finance a private camp in Maine, where I could cut trees and at the same time do enough gym and road work to keep myself in fairly good boxing condition. Jim had visions of me as champion one day. He wanted nothing to interfere. Naturally, I could not accept his offer. I felt it would be better to take the chance of fighting.

This, by the way, was my first fight in my home town since 1917. Ambrose was a stocky fellow with a heavy jaw, which made a beautiful target. The first shot I let go, with my increased weight (I now weighed 189 pounds) and strength, knocked Ambrose into a somersault. He was counted out. My hands did not get a real test, however.

Bagley persuaded Tex Rickard to put me in a semi-final match at the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, which was three days later at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City. My opponent was Soldier Jones, of Canada. Though the referee stopped the contest to save Jones from further punishment it was a sorry exhibition that I gave at Boyle's Thirty Acres that afternoon. It was particularly disappointing to me because of the number of people who saw it.

FAILS BEFORE 90,000 FANS

I found my extra 14 pounds, after the first round, a most difficult load to carry around. I was so slow that I could not get out of my own way, much less out of the way of the wild swings that Jones was pitching at me, several of which landed on either side of my jaw in the first round. Had I not possessed a rather tough chin I am convinced that my career would have ignominiously ended that day before the 90,000 spectators who were forced to sit through our spectacle while waiting for Georges and Jack to start their "Battle of the Century."

Tomorrow, Tunney will tell of his own disappointment over his showing against Soldier Jones, how Jimmy Eagleton and Harry F. McCormack did much to help re-establish him as a boxer, and how Doc Bagley launched an effective publicity campaign in 1921-22.

The eastern squad, under the tutelage of Coaches Andy Kerr, of Colgate, and Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, works out at Stanford University. The Westerners train at Kezar Stadium here, which will be the scene of battle.

Kerr and Hanley arrived with a squad of 21 players yesterday. Joe Kurth, Notre Dame's all-America tackle and twenty-second member of the squad, was already on hand to greet his teammates. He remained in California after the Notre Dame-Southern California game in Los Angeles.

Seven western squad members also rolled in yesterday. They were led by Dana X. Bible, Nebraska coach, who will act with Orin Hollingbery, of Washington State, in whipping the team into shape. They were Buck Koy and Harry Stafford, halfbacks from Texas University; Frank Christensen, fullback, and Jack Johnson, tackle, from Utah University; Steve Hokuf, end, and Lawrence Ely, University of Nebraska center, and George Atkeson, University of Kansas, guard.

BILL TILDEN HOME

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(INS.)—William T. Tilden, professional tennis champion, returned here last night from Europe, where he and members of his troupe played in 12 countries. He was accompanied by Bruce Barnes, Texas, and Hans Nusslein, German champion.

HEAVIES SIGN FOR DEMPSEY

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey has stepped back into the middle of the heavyweight prize fight picture, but this time as a big league promoter, with a 15-round match between Max Schmeling and Max Baer as his first offering.

The former heavyweight king gathered the boxing boys around him in his hotel headquarters yesterday in a manner reminiscent of the large way Tex Rickard used to do such things, and announced that he had signed the two Maxes for battle under his direction for 15 rounds, either here or in Chicago, some time in June.

With him was Joe Jacobs, manager of the German who lost his crown to Jack Sharkey last summer, and Ancil Hoffman, manager of Baer. No announcement was made as to terms for the match.

Dempsey has an agreement with Tim Mara, owner of the New York Giants Professional Football team, for the use next summer of either the Yankee Stadium or the Polo Grounds, both of which ball parks Mara has leased for boxing.

If the match is staged here, Mara said he would be glad to turn either park over to Dempsey. It will be weeks, Dempsey said, before he will make a decision as to the site for the match.

YAROSZ' BROTHER HURT

MONACA, Pa., Dec. 23.—Victor Yarosz, brother of Teddy Yarosz, star welterweight boxer, is recovering today from cuts about the face suffered yesterday when his brother's automobile, driven by the boxer, skidded and smashed into a car driven by Phillip Mason, of Beaver Falls.

WOMEN AND BOY ON ALL-STAR SHOOT TEAM

VANDALIA, O., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Two women and a 15-year-old boy are included on the annual "All-America Trapshooting Team" selected by Jimmy Robinson, of Minneapolis, former statistician for the Amateur Trapshooting Association at Vandalia.

Robinson has followed the clay target game since 1908, the year registered targets came into existence. Three years ago he selected his first "all" team.

The two women honored this year are Mrs. Walter P. Andrews, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. H. E. Grigsby, of Oklahoma City. Mrs. Andrews was ranked fourth on the team and Mrs. Grigsby was sixth. The fifth position went to Ned Lilly, of Stanton, Mich., a 15-year-old lad who has competed with veteran shooters for several years.

CROTHERS LEADER

The 1932 team of 10 is headed by Steve Crothers, well-known Philadelphia shooter, who, at the Grand American here last summer, crashed 598 out of 600 targets at 16 yards for a new record. He also won the "champion of champioons" race with 199 out of 200, and tied the world record on all-around targets at the Pennsylvania shoot with 393 out of 400.

Second position on the team was awarded A. J. Stauber, of Los Angeles, Cal., who topped the high average gunners for 1932 with a record mark of 994 on 1,000 registered targets. He broke 200 straight to win the California state title and got a .9687 percentage on 320 doubles targets to lead the high average shooters of North America in that division.

Fred Tomlin, Glassboro, N. J., professional and world open champion, was given third-place ranking. He is the high-average pro for the year with a new record for professionals of .9895 per cent on 2,100 targets. He won the open title with 200 straight and the New Jersey state with 199 out of 200.

MRS. ANDREWS FOURTH

Mrs. Andrews, the fourth ranking star, was high over all women at the Grand American with 890 out of 1,000; broke 77 out of 100 to win the North American doubles; took high-average handicap for women with .8816 on 600 registered targets and scored 190 out of 200 to take second in the women's division of the Grand American proper.

Lilly, the boy sensation of the season, won the Michigan state title with 197 out of 200, scored 199 at the Grand American and captured the world junior championship with 99 out of 100.

Mrs. Grigsby, holder of the world women's championship by virtue of her record of 191 out of 200 at the Grand American, also won the G. A. H. women's preliminary handicap with 93 out of 100 from 20 yards, and took second honors on the high-average roll to Mrs. Andrews with .9090 on 1,000 targets.

Seventh place was awarded another professional, W. B. Sale, of Denver, Col.

E. W. (Ted) Renfro, Dell, Mont., ranked eighth; Mark Arie, of Champaign, Ill., was given ninth position, and Earle Donahue, of Minneapolis Minn., was placed tenth.

Fight Results

BUCCOS STRONG IN RESERVE PLAYERS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Howard Groskloss, Pirate infielder, and student at the Yale school of medicine, was back at his Sheraden home today for a Christmas visit. Although Howdy is deeply engrossed in his medical studies, his love for baseball appears to be as keen as his desire to be a doctor, and his presence on the Pittsburgh squad insures valuable reserve strength.

Groskloss

Tommy Thevenow, Groskloss and Floyd Young are the Buccaneer infield reservists. The Sheraden athlete made a big name for himself when he jumped into major league action in the middle of the 1931 campaign. With Thevenow serving as a balance for the boy without minor league experience, Howdy performed like an old stager around the middle of the diamond, and his bat swayed a lot of games to the Pirate dugout.

INJURY HALTS HOWDY

In the last half of the race of last year, Groskloss injured one of his legs and Manager Jewel Ens sent a distress call to Wichita where Tony Piet was performing like a star. Tony arrived and stayed in his fret clip in the big league lineup.

Piet's work this year was so keen he kept Howard in the shade of the Pittsburgh dugouts while the actual battles were in progress.

Groskloss arrived late at the training camp owing to pressure of examinations. At present he faces problems of this nature which are a bit more serious. His instructors may find a way in which Howdy can get to the training camp next spring, but the young man is doubtful on this matter.

YOUNG FINE FIELDER

Floyd Young, fleet Tulsa graduate, who has yet to be seen in action by Pittsburgh fans, is one of those versatile boys who can do a trick either in the infield or in the pasture. The competition for the second utility infield berth appears to be between Young and Groskloss, although Floyd might also be considered as a rival of Adam Comorosky and Forrest Jensen for one of the outfield reserve bunks.

I have not seen Young perform, but Scout Carleton Molesworth, his sponsor, states that the Tulsa sensation can outthrow any member of the Pirate pasture brigade, so he must have a wonderful arm; moreover, he is a ball hawk and a splendid baserunner, according to Moley. The latter says there is some doubt as to the hitting ability of the new man, but he did not appear to have much trouble with the pitchers of the Western League last year.

CHILLYSAUCE

Wishing his Pittsburgh friends a merry Christmas, Paul Waner sends his greetings and those of his family from their winter home at Miami Beach. Enclosed was a photograph showing Paul and a couple of buddies in the act of landing a deep sea fish that threatened to scuttle their little boat.

Brother Lloyd, meantime, is wintering with the old folks on the Oklahoma farm. The classic line, "You can take the boy out of the country but you cannot take the country out of the boy," fits the vee centerfielder to a tee.

George Susce, Calico Hill boy, who caught for Montreal this year, and who was recalled by Detroit, already is getting pointed for next season.

Susce has gone in for basketball along with George Dashbach, another catcher from the Oakland sandlots. George caught many of the Pirate batting session last summer and the veterans of the club predict a bright future for him on the diamond. At present he is coaching the Newman Club basketball team. He starred at baseball at Villa Nova. Dashbach is only 20.

Pirate Manager George Gibson is in his Canadian home for the Christmas season. He expects to bring his family to Pittsburgh after the New Year.

PRIMO TO BOX ON COAST

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Barred from the ranks of California boxing for participating in a bout that did not please the State Athletic Commission, Primo Carnera, the Italian mammountain, is returning to the Coast to exhibit his fistic wares.

He will meet Dynamite Jackson, 200-pound Los Angeles Negro, in a 10-round bout here December 29. Carnera was suspended in the state following his bout in Oakland, April 14, 1930, with Leon Chevalier San Francisco Negro. Carnera won in the sixth round when Chevalier's second tossed in the towel.

Chevalier asserted he had been threatened with bodily harm if he failed to "lay down."

Covenanter Passers Win Trip Final

JERSEY CITY, Dec. 23.—Geneva College completed its four-game basketball trip through the East with a 50-50 standing, winning two and losing two.

The Covenanters last night scored early and often to defeat John Marshall College of Law, 50 to 40. The Genevians sped away to a commanding lead and managed to withstand a valiant rally by the Marshall tossers in the first half. The lineup:

Geneva—50.	G.	F.	Pt.	Marshall—40.	G.	F.	Pt.

Mack, 70 Today, Lists Greatest In Baseball

Greatest pitcher—Christy Mathewson.

BEER TO EASE BABE'S PATH

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Let good legal beer flow through the spigots and Mr. George Herman Ruth, the baseball man, will ask nothing more from the nation in general in the way of a Christmas present.

The Babe, all off-season 232 pounds of him, has not turned humanitarian, nor has he developed any sudden thirst in the past few days.

With the Babe it's strictly a baseball problem. He said:

"Ho, ho. Just give Col. Jake Ruppert the right to make good beer again and I'll have no trouble signing any contract with the Yankees for 1933."

Despite the economy talk of the baseball owners, and rumors of wholesale baseball salary cuts for 1933, Ruth doesn't seem to be worrying much about his forthcoming conferences with Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, beer or no beer.

JIMMY ROONEY TO BE COACH

Rooney has kept his hand in the sport actively since being graduated from Pitt, playing regularly with the independent team of the North Side named after him and also competing in the alumni game against the Pitt varsity last Saturday.

May Cut Racing In Empire State

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Thoroughbred racing on the tracks of New York state will be reduced from 169 to 151 days next year if the tentative schedule, now being mapped out, is adopted at the January meeting of the Jockey Club.

The schedule calls for the season to open May 6, nearly three weeks later than it opened this year, at Jamaica. The last race will be run at Empire City, October 27.

The tentative program again gives Saratoga the month of August. A 19-day spring meeting at Belmont Park, May 27-June 14, and 12 days in the fall from September 2-15 is provided.

The opening date is the day tentatively set for the running of the Kentucky Derby and one week in advance of the Preakness.

Dodgers Card 22 Training Games

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The Brooklyn Dodgers baseball club today announced spring training plans which send the players to their new camp at Miami a week later than usual, and includes a schedule of 22 exhibition games with major and minor league clubs.

Pitchers and catchers will report to Manager Max Carey, February 26 and the rest of the players a week later. The complete schedule:

March 11, 12, Philadelphia Athletics at Miami; 18, 19, Buffalo at Miami; 21, St. Louis Browns at Miami; 22, Buffalo at Miami; 23, 24, St. Louis Browns at West Palm Beach; 25, 26 St. Louis Cardinals at Miami; 27, St. Louis Browns at West Palm Beach; 28, St. Louis Cardinals at Bradenton; 29, 30, Philadelphia Athletics at Fort Myers.

April 1, St. Louis Browns at Miami; 2, 3, St. Louis Browns at Jacksonville; 4, Boston Braves at Richmond; 5, Baltimore at Baltimore; 6, 7, Washington at Washington; 8, 9, New York Yankees at Brooklyn.

Phelan Refuses To Sign Contract

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Jimmy Phelan, football coach of the University of Washington, was en route East today, while the dotted line on the renewed contract offered him for three years at $10,000 a year was still unbeautified by his signature.

A full day of conferences yesterday brought no results, for Phelan, late of Purdue, said he would like to know where the greenbacks are coming from before he pledges himself to build any more football machines for the Huskies.

Root Is Selected Yale Coach, Report

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 23.—(INS.)—Reginald D. Root, now freshman coach and a star tackle of Yale teams in 1924 and 1925, will be named head coach of football at Yale to succeed Dr. Marvin A. Stevens, it was learned on excellent authority at the university today.

Formal announcement of Root's appointment is expected to be made over the week-end by Malcolm Farmer. The board of athletic control already has met and made its decision.

CANUCKS VICTORS

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—Canadian hockey team, Winnipeg Monitors, yesterday defeated the Prague Tennis Club, 3 to 1, scoring twice in the first and once in the third period.

SEES AMERICAN INVESTMENT ABROAD

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Though the chapter of America's amateur lending abroad has ended, the next phase—after normal conditions have been restored throughout the world—will consist of an export of American capital to acquire equity, or ownership, interests in property abroad, according to Charles S. Dewey, Chicago business executive. Mr. Dewey is financial counsellor to Colgate-Palmolive - Pete Company, one-time financial adviser to Poland and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. Rukeyser

According to this view, American capital will next be exported by expert and specialized business men operating with the funds of their own company and having to account to the executive committee of their company once a month. Such funds, he indicated, would be used to purchase branch factories, assembly plants, and distributing agencies overseas. The funds would remain under American management, which would not look to alien concerns for interest payments, but would seek rewards only through their own successful management. In describing typical industrial penetrations abroad, Mr. Dewey said that the net effect was to raise the living standard of foreigners.

Asked how American labor would benefit, Mr. Dewey indicated that in the first place it would get an opportunity to produce such machinery and equipment as would be exported.

He also said that Americans are taken abroad for key positions in such operations, which rely on native common labor. Tracing the operation further, he said that, if successful, the venture would eventually return dividends to the American stockholders, enabling them to buy luxury products and thus heighten job-giving domestic industry.

It is interesting that no one looks forward to a near-term resumption of pre-depression American lending abroad.

BUSINESS

Steel Income Accounts Expected to Show Improvement

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

STEEL MILL activity has slumped to a point close to the low level reached last summer. The decline has been somewhat greater than the recession predicted by some steel executives. It is generally expected that further recession will take place over the holiday period.

While it was hoped that the steel trade would not duplicate the low levels of the depression recorded last summer, it must be remembered that the end of the year normally marks a low point in ingot production. The possibility that the previous low may be passed during the holiday period is not necessarily an unfavorable indication for the future. It does cast a shade of doubt, however, on the belief that a genuine upward movement in business acitivity is under way. Its true implication appears to be that business has been bumping along at the bottom since last summer, making no progress in either direction, except to reflect seasonal influences.

* * *

Steel Trade Will Show Improvement

IN SPITE OF the fact that the year-end decline has gone to greater length than executives in the industry expected, most steel companies will show improvement in their statements for the final quarter of the year in comparison to the third quarter.

With only a single outstanding exception the major steel companies lost money in the third quarter. Operating economies as well as the fact that production in October and November showed improvement over the summer months will be responsible for material reductions in their deficits for the final three months of the year.

National Steel, the single large producer in the industry which has kept its operations on a profitable basis, is expected to report slightly greater earnings for the fourth quarter than it did for the third quarter.

* * *

Year-End Results Not Significant

STEEL EXECUTIVES do not feel that results during the final weeks of the year are particularly significant. The general opinion is that the autumn improvement marked the end of the downward movement in activity. At present they feel that the industry merely is marking time until orders for the new year are placed. In the latter part of January and in the early weeks of February there may be a real indication of the chances for a long upward trend in industrial demand for steel.

Steel is a basic material for so many major industries that any real progress toward recovery must be reflected promptly in ingot production and in mill activity.

Forbes

Aldrich Isn't Same Type As Albert Wiggin

—By B. C. FORBES—

WE THINK of executives of large corporations as hired men, not as owners; but the fact is that many executives invest practically all their money in their own companies.

Mr. Forbes

ALBERT H. WIGGIN, upbuilder of what is now America's largest bank, the Chase National of New York, confided to me some time ago that the bulk of his own and his family's fortune was invested in the institution's stock, making him at that time the largest stockholder, and that this was one reason why he sough to have the Rockefellers become closely identified with the bank.

He was getting along in years and was looking forward to the time when he would want to enjoy a life more leisurely than the very strenuous life he had always led. The Rockefellers had become an American institution, a tower of strength, symbolizing great wealth, unimpeachable character, conspicuous administrative skill.

Hence, inducing the Rockefellers to become the largest stockholders, and having a leading member of the Rockfeller group, a man of acknowledged ability and in the prime of life, become actively associated with the running of the institution, would give the Chase enhanced standing, enhanced stability, enhanced prestige and at the same time eliminate the idea that the Chase was in any sense a "one man bank," "Wiggin's bank."

WINTHROP W. ALDRICH, lawyer-son of the late Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, and brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., immediately became a power in the Chase when that institution, through the initiative of Mr. Wiggin, absorbed the Equitable Trust Company, known as a Rockefeller organization.

That was in June, 1930. Since then chief responsibility for managing the Chase bank has been divided between Mr. Wiggin and Mr. Aldrich.

NOW MR. ALDRICH, who is only 47, will take the helm, supported by Charles McCain, chairman of the board of directors, and John McHugh, chairman of the executive committee.

WALL STREET periodically had rumors that Mr. Wiggin planned to retire. Always they were emphatically denied.

I learn that, the last time such rumors were circulated with more than ordinary persistency, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gave a big dinner in honor of Mr. Wiggin, when eulogies of Mr. Wiggin and his vital value to the institution were expressed in the warmest language.

THE SECRET of Mr. Wiggin's impending retirement was so well kept that the news this week came as a complete surprise even to those in the bank. Mr. Wiggin plans to remain identified with the institution as a director and member of the executive committee; and he will also retain most of his 40 corporation directorships.

Absolute retirement, absolute idleness would not fit his temperament, his active mentality, his love for mingling with men of affairs—Al Wiggin is famous for his extraordinarily wide circle of intimate friends.

MR. ALDRICH is a different type. He has all the reserve of the Rockefellers. He has the Rockefeller seriousness, the Rockefeller calmness of judgment, the Rockefeller fixity of purpose. He is little swayed by emotion. Lawyer-like, he is governed more by logic than by sentiment, by figures rather than by favoritism. He has the mien of a high court judge.

His intimates declare that he possesses quite unusual ability, that he forms judgments only after mastering all the pertinent facts, that he is ideally fitted to act as a pilot when stormy seas arise.

AT THAT, it won't be easy to think of the Chase Bank without thinking of Al Wiggin.

URGES UNIFIED RAIL SYSTEM

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Consolidation of all the nation's railroads into one unified system, privately owned and operated under federal supervision, was recommended to the national transportation committee today by Nathan L. Amster, president of the Citizens' National Railroad League.

In a memorandum to the committee, headed by former President Coolidge, Amster declared his suggestion would put railroads in a position to earn their interest charges "even on their present reduced annual gross revenue of about $3,500,000,000."

Amster, who is president of the Manhattan Railway Company and a director of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, predicted his plan would save the railroads $500,000,000 a year without further wage reductions, "although that too might be desirable."

Traffic that has gone to pipe lines, waterways, buses and automobiles is "forever lost" to the railroads, he said. Loans by the R. F. C., he added, are only "delaying the day of reckoning."

NATION'S GOLD STOCKS GAIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—(AP.)—French gold reserves totaling more than 170 times the defaulted war debt payment were reported today by the Federal Reserve Board.

Noting a gain of $25,000,000 in the month preceding November 18, the board placed France's holdings on that date at $3,266,000,000. The war debts payment was $19,261,432.

The board said in its monthly review that most of the gold gained by the Bank of France came from the London bullion market, where shipments from British India and South Africa were disposed of in large volume. About the same time, England, which paid $95,000,000 of war debts, had gold reserve of $678,000,000.

The board said that during November the United States' stock of gold continued to grow and at the end of the month totaled $4,340,000,000, an increase of $430,000,000 since the low point of last June.

STOCKS DRIFT IN QUIET TRADING

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—The stock market again lapsed into a state of quiescence today, after yesterday's selling flurry.

A little more selling drifted through the list here and there, but there was no repetition of yesterday's pounding down of prices. On the whole, today's market held about steady, in listless, pre-holiday trading.

The bottling stocks attracted some attention. Crown Cork dropping four points, then recovering partially. Owens-Illinois Glass sagged more than a point.

The moderately cheerful tone of the weekly mercantile reviews attracted some attention, but Wall street is now most interested in the prospects for 1933, and finds the outlook rather obscure. Christmas trade was said to have taken a fair spurt. The New York Federal Reserve Bank, however, reported that department store sales in the Metropolitan area in the first half of December had been about 24 per cent under last year.

The action of the bottling stocks was variously explained, but seemed to reflect withdrawal of professional support, as the probable course of the beer bill in the Senate seemed highly conjectural. The government winter wheat crop estimate, indicating the smallest crop in years, may have been partly responsible for the selling of Santa Fe. Some brokers thought, too, that the market was still under some pressure from sales to establish losses for income tax purposes.

TRADE BUYING LIFTS COTTON

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Cotton futures opened steady, 3@8 higher on overnight trade buying and small offers. January, 5.72; March, 5.87; May, 6.01; July, 6.13; October, 6.29.

The circulation of January notices estimated at about 25,000 bales brought out some near month liquidation, but it was absorbed by spot houses, with January selling up to 5.73, or 5 points net higher, while May advanced to 6.02, or 7 points from yesterday's closing quotation.

No special news factor except reports of continued small offerings from the south were mentioned in connection with the early bulge, but it looked as if the decline of yesterday afternoon had attracted some overnight buying. This was supplied at about the initial prices, however, and prices eased slightly under renewed liquidation.

At the end of the first half hour January was holding around 5.70 and May 5.96, or about 1 to 3 points net higher.

January advanced to 5.75 and May to 6.00 or about 5 to 8 points net higher with little southern selling in evidence. The market at midday was quiet and fairly steady at reactions of 2 or 3 points from the best.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 23.—Cotton, 27,000 bales, including 21,200 American. Spot quiet; prices eight points lower; quotations in pence; American strict good middling, 5.77; good middling, 5.47; strict middling, 5.22; middling, 5.07; strict low middling, 4.92; low middling, 4.77; strict good ordinary, 4.57; good ordinary, 4.27. Futures closed steady. December, 4.84; January, 4.86; March, 4.89; May, 4.91; July, 4.92; October, 4.96.

Jersey Unit Cuts Christmas Melon

HARRISBURG, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—A $3,500,000 Christmas melon was cut today for stockholders of the Tuscarora Oil Company, Ltd., who voted to distribute an "ever-accumulation of cash."

Checks are now in the mails.

The company, which operates a pipe line from Midland, Pa., to Bayway, N. J., reduced the par value of its stock from $5,000,000 to $1,500,000. It is controlled by Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Pig Crop Exceeds Last Year by 4%

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—An increase of about 4 per cent in the total fall pig crop of 1932 over last year is shown by the December pig crop report of the Department of Agriculture.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Willys-Overland Company and subsidiaries report for the quarter ended September 30 last, net loss of $1,165,971 after depreciation, reserves, etc., comparing with net loss of $1,766,258 in the preceding quarter, and net loss of $184,185 in the third quarter of 1931. Nine months' net loss totals $3,964,624, after charges, and compares with net profit of $120,465 or 95c a share on 126,617 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock in the first nine months of 1931.

British-American Tobacco Company, Ltd., reports for the year ended September 30, last, net profit of £5,438,253 after charges and income taxes, equal after £1,462,500 7 and 6 per cent preferred dividends, to 20.58 per cent on £23,582,761 ordinary stock. This compared with £6,334,448 or 20.14 per cent on ordinary stock in the preceding fiscal year.

Have You the Room I Want?

I am a stranger in Pittsburgh, I just arrived. Many are coming "in" NOW. I want to be near my work, but in a pleasant location. I want a homelike room with nice people. I am only one of hundreds of young men that want the same.

I do not know your street names so I shop up and down the Sun-Telegraph "To Rent—Rooms" advertisements—not up and down the street for signs. You probably have just the room I am looking for. Won't you help me to find your room by advertising it in the "To Rent—Room" want ads of the Sun-Telegraph. Phone GRant 5400.

MARY FAITH

By BEATRICE BURTON

Weeks of Happiness Follow The Marriage of Mary Faith and Kim

CHAPTER XIV.

"I hope you're not leaving because of—last night," he said. "There's no reason why you should leave, Mary Faith. We're still good friends, aren't we? We can go on working together, can't we?"

"How on earth can I tell him I'm going to be married?" she asked herself.

"I've made up my mind to leave," she said awkwardly, and because she had begun to feel as if she were going to cry, her voice was cold. She turned toward the door.

"Well, I'm sorry, Mary Faith. And, look here, if you ever want to come back we're always waiting for you. You'll remember that, won't you?"

She nodded.

"And there's something else—" He put his hand on the knob of the door. "I want you to know that you can always count on me if you need me for anything. You know how I feel about you, Mary Faith, and I'm not going to change."

MARRIES KIM

He held the door open for her and stood watching her as she went across the big empty office and vanished down the stairs.

Mary Faith and Kim were married at high noon in the chapel of the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

December sunlight came in through the high, stained-glass windows and laid its bright finger on the pages of Dr. Pomeroy's prayer book as he began to read the marriage service:

"Dearly beloved, I wonder if you know how happy I am to be standing here beside you at last!" she said to him in her heart while the minister went on with the beautiful and simple words that were binding them together.

Kim, being Kim, had forgotten to buy the wedding ring, and Claire Maldon had let him take hers for the ceremony. Mary Faith looked down at it as Kim slipped it over her finger and found herself wondering what he had done with her engagement ring.

"I'll never ask him about it," she made up her mind. In all probability he had taken it back to the jewelry store where he had bought it. He was always in need of money.

Well, she would see to it that he saved part of his money from now on, she told herself. She was a good manager. Hadn't she saved eighteen hundred dollars herself during the last four years? She thought comfortably of them tucked away in her savings account downtown.

"I can buy lots of little things for the house." In her mind she went through the dingy Wilton street flat, putting up new white curtains in the sitting room, setting the dining room table with a set of Indian Tree china, tacking down shiny new blue-and-white linoleum on the kitchen floor. Her fingers fairly itched to get at that flat and make it a brighter place for Kim.

He was turning to her now and Dr. Pomeroy was beaming at them both as he closed his prayer book.

Claire's bright blue eyes were on Kim's face and she was smiling broadly at him. She laid one of her white-gloved hands on his shoulder.

"Well, Sandy," she asked him, "how do you feel now that it's all over?"

WITNESS TALKATIVE

Kim laughed. "I feel just like a married man," he said. "That service certainly does tie you up for life, doesn't it?—Till Death us do part.' That's quite a line, isn't it?"

Claire turned her eyes to Mary Faith. "Now that you're safely married, could I please have my wedding ring?" she asked. "They say it's bad luck to take off your wedding ring, and this is the first time I've had mine off since Jack put it on last October. I keep it on even when I wash dishes."

She talked constantly. She talked all the way into the registry where Mary Faith and Kim wrote their names in a book filled with the names of other brides and grooms and all the way out of the shadowy old church into the sunlight.

"Sandy," she said to Kim as they stood in the street beside Kim's shabby little roadster, "We brought you and Mary Faith a wedding present and put it in the back of your car. It's a package of books—all the new novels that looked good to us. We knew they'd be lifesavers for you down in that dead little town where you're going."

She had a light, pretty voice that was like a very simple piece of music.

"You don't believe what I'm telling you," it rippled on, "but in a week or so you two will be so bored with each other that you'll yawn every three minutes by the clock. You'll wish you'd never seen each other . . . Jack and I scrapped all the time we were on our honeymoon, didn't we, Jack?"

"Well, we did whether he admits it or not," said Claire. "We fought like two strange bull-dogs . . . You see, we thought we wanted to be all by ourselves, just the way you do. So we went 'way up into the North Woods, miles from everywhere. And four days after we got there it began to rain. It just poured! And we didn't have a thing to read or even a deck of cards! It was ghastly! Next time I get married I'm going to Atlantic City or Palm Beach or some other crowded spot for my honeymoon, and no fooling!"

REACH DESTINATION

"When you get lonesome come back to town and call up the Maldons!" Her voice floated after them through the clear bright air. "Don't forget, Sandy!"

* * *

The gray-blue shadows of late afternoon lay across the snow when Mary Faith and Kim drove into the main street of Garrettsville—"the main drag," as Kim called it.

It was a long narrow street lined with little shops—a candy store called The Sugar Bowl, a White Front Meat Market, a Five-and-Ten filled with tinsel and toys, a jewelry store that reminded Mary Faith that she had no wedding ring.

Kim parked the car at the little telegraph office and they sent off his day letters—one to his mother and one to Mrs. Puckett.

"Now, then, we've done our duty," Kim said when they came out into the snow and sunshine once more; "and we can forget the rest of the world for two solid weeks, Mrs. Farrell."

The world that Mary Faith had always known already seemed very far away. Was it only last night that she had sat talking to Mrs. Puckett in the house on River street? Only this morning that she had said goodbye to Mark Nesbit in her old office in the Nesbit Building? It seemed ages ago.

MARY FAITH PLEASED

Snow lay deep on its porches and along the tops of its diamond-paned windows. A silver fringe of icicles hung from its low-pitched roof and on either side of it stood a tall fir tree.

"It isn't a real house at all. It's a picture on an old-fashioned Christmas card, Kim, and I know it!" Mary Faith declared as they drove up the hill and into the drifts of the backyard.

"It's old-fashioned, all right. There isn't even a garage," Kim said dryly. He always seemed embarrassed when Mary Faith made extravagant statements or quoted poetry to him. "The car will probably freeze, standing in that woodshed all night."

He set the suitcases and the Maldons' books on the back porch and unlocked the door.

The kitchen was filled with a faint spicy smell as if gingerbread had often been baked in it, and the low red sun shining in through the west windows made it seem very bright and cozy. There were rag rugs on the floor and a big cushioned rocker stood near the stove.

"Did you ever see such a lovely kitchen in all your life!" She turned wide starry eyes to Kim. "And look at the wall paper in the dining room! All little Chinese pagodas and boats! Why, this house is just a house of a dream, isn't it?"

"Is it?" Kim asked. He had no eyes for the little house. He had come up beside her and his arms were around her, holding her so close that she seemed to feel the quick heavy drumming of his heart in her own heart. She sighed, lifting her face to him.

"Kim," she said with a throbbing note in her voice, "Kim, I'm never happy unless I am with you."

* * *

For two weeks both of them were gloriously happy with a happiness that Mary Faith had never dreamed of. The days were gone before they knew it, and yet all of them were pretty much alike.

Every morning Mary Faith went downstairs as soon as it was light and made the coffee. She made it as she had learned to make it at the Business Woman's Club cooking classes, with hot foamy milk, and carried it upstairs on a tray. She and Kim would sit up in bed in their bathrobes and drink it, telling each other with great contentment that this was the life!

Synopsis

Mary Faith and Kimberley Farrell have been engaged for some time. Kim's attitude changes brusquely when his mother objects. The latter treats Mary Faith coldly and breaks the engagement. Heartbroken, Mary Faith returns to her office and holds her job. Mark Nesbit, her employer, taken ill, has Mary Faith driven to his country home daily for two weeks. He tells her of his love for her. She halts him, saying she will never love anyone as she did Kim. While in a jewelry store with Mark, selecting a Christmas ring for his sister, Mary Faith meets Kim with a girl. Next morning Kim calls at Mary Faith's boarding house. He assures her of his love and proposes immediate marriage. Mary Faith melts in his arms. The next morning she goes to the office to get her belongings.

Now Go On

All Out For the Last Rush

There seems to be a better spirit in the air this year and it costs nothing to breathe it.

We've made a round of the Fifth avenue stores. The proprietors are as happy as hens in the neighbor's flower bed. They've seen people they haven't seen for years.

All the department stores have been busier than sailors in a double gale and we hope your town's the same. Folks are spending their money because they know it will make their friends happy.

Of course, we always have that grouch who thinks that dipping his toast in his own soup is casting bread on the waters. We'd be in a tough fix if that kind of a man was the world's leading philanthropist. Fortunately, he ain't and never was.

He is more than balanced by the thousands of people who gallop up and down the aisles looking for presents for their pals.

That's the kind of free-wheeling we admire.

If you haven't invested in Christmas cheer you still have tomorrow. And don't let anybody rib you about mittens and woolen sox. They may laugh over a present of carpet slippers, but we could use a pair right now. They're still the old reliable safety deposit vault for tired dogs.

It ain't what you give or the cost. There never was a present that didn't make somebody feel better for the getting.

The only present we dread is the kind that makes the giver feel better to get rid of. And there ain't many of those.

So, spread yourself all over the lot tomorrow and finish up that shopping business pronto. Keep on diving into that pocketbook until you reach sand bottom.

We've been booted, shoved and elbowed all over the city this week, but we haven't seen anybody get mad. It's just like everybody was playing on the same football team. We have lost about 10 pounds and two pairs of reading spectacles, but we ain't worried about Christmas morning because you can be nearsighted and still hear people laugh.

Keep Calm and Try to Be Graceful in Travail

That drives women, screaming, in haste from the room;
The neckties, of course, need not be thrown away,
You can give them to someone a year from today,
And the perfume should not be dashed down the sink

Governor Roosevelt's Childhood

His Mother Tells Of 'The Boy Who Grew Up To Be President'

Copyright, 1932, New York Evening Journal, Inc. Registered U. S. Patent Office.

Millions of American mothers will read with intense interest and pleasure a story told in the January number of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE by Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, mother of President-elect Roosevelt, describing the boyhood of her distinguished son.

The pictures reproduced here and the substance of this article are taken by permission from GOOD HOUSEKEEPING which will publish Mrs. Roosevelt's account of her son's life, that will appear in three installments, the first in the current issue.

* * * *

These two pictures of President Roosevelt as a little boy will appeal to the hearts of mothers. They will like to remember what Mrs. Roosevelt said to radio listeners when she heard that her boy had been elected President:

"WELL, I HOPE THAT HE WILL MAKE A GOOD ONE."

* * * *

In GOOD HOUSEKEEPING Mrs. Roosevelt assures you that she never had the slightest notion that the little baby she holds in her arms would grow up to be President of the United States. His seventh cousin, Theodore Roosevelt, had been President, but that did not suggest any presidency to her. Her son, as a little boy, liked to dress in sailor's clothes, and wanted to go to sea. His great-grandfather, his mother's grandfather, had been a sea captain and the owner of a fleet of rugged sailing vessels that sailed from Boston to China, around the cape and across the wide Pacific.

Mrs. Roosevelt says:

"Did I ever think when he was a little boy that Franklin might be President? Never, oh, never! That was the last thing I should ever have imagined for him, or that he should be in public life of any sort."

She did not dream that the little boy, who liked to wear sailor's clothes when he was nine years old, would live to be a most efficient Assistant Secretary of the United States Navy, in a great war, and later President of the United States.

The next president as a baby in his mother's arms in 1882.
"At the very outset Franklin was plump, pink and nice. I used to love to bathe and dress him."

Mrs. Roosevelt tells you that all she wanted for her son was that he should be "like his father, great and honorable, just and kind, an upstanding American."

"From the time he was ever so small, Franklin was his father's gay companion. Their companionship was based on his father's never-failing understanding of the little problems that can seem so grave to a child."

"We never tried, you see, his father and I, to influence him against his own tastes and inclinations or to shape his life. At least we made every effort not to."

* * * *

Mothers bringing up little boys with the firm belief that they WILL be Presidents of the United States, may like to know something about the early education of the future President.

The mother tells about it in her extremely interesting article in GOOD HOUSEKEEPING from which we are permitted to quote to a limited extent:

"It was really a very simple schedule. He used to get up at seven and have his breakfast at about eight. His lessons, which he had at home, lasted from nine until twelve, when he usually went out for a run or some games until lunch time, which was at one. After luncheon there were more studies, this time until about four, and then he was permitted any kind of exercise or play that he fancied.

"His diversions varied with the season of the year and with his age. He loved to run and play ball. He was at home in the saddle at an age at which he looked too tiny for safety astride even the Welsh pony on whose back he used to jog each day. Rain or shine he would trot at a clip down the winding paths to study with the Rogers boys, our nearest neighbors and his inseparable companions."

* * * *

The story of Gov. Roosevelt's protected, carefully planned, well guarded life in boyhood is different from the boyhood stories of some other Presidents, different from that of Lincoln, who lived in a little wooden cabin, with a dirt floor and no window, and studied at night by the light of a blazing fire.

But it is what a boy has in his head and what he inherits from ancestors on both sides, not the clothes that he wears or the pony that he rides, that count.

There is no doubt that the future President Roosevelt owes a great deal not merely to the ancestral line named Roosevelt, but to his mother, to her ancestry, the men that sailed the Pacific and went to far-off China.

* * * *

Mrs. Roosevelt's article in the January number of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE which as millions of American women know, is the "trade paper" of the American home, will interest you, telling as it does the story of this tiny little boy on his father's shoulder, gradually moving from that shoulder to the White House, and the responsibilities of a great nation in deep trouble.

'Salary Slackers'

Gov. White, of Ohio, Gives Some of Our County Officials a Matter to Ponder.

While the county officials of Beaver and other Pennsylvania counties have voluntarily reduced their salaries to ease the taxpayers' burden, Allegheny County officials, 37 of whom are paid $10,000 a year or more, refuse to make the slightest sacrifice.

We commend to their attention an official statement just issued by Gov. George White, in which he says he hopes to direct the whole force of public opinion upon every public official who refuses voluntarily to reduce his salary. Gov. White says:

In continuing to demand the salaries of 1929 the Allegheny County officials are really insisting on a raise in their buying power; for, with the reduction in rents, wages and commodity prices that has occurred in the last three years, they could take a cut in salary and still be able to buy all the things that could be purchased with their salaries in 1929.

Science Aids Industry

The Mellon Institute Has Shown the Benefits to Be Gained from Research.

"Technocracy" is the name of a new idea for government, advocated by a group of New York engineers and architects. Pittsburgh's business and industrial leaders are not in favor of some of the things proposed by the "technocrats," but agree with them that the latest discoveries of science can be applied advantageously to the revision of our commercial and economic system.

It is worthy of being remembered, in connection with this discussion, that Pittsburghers have been in the van in applying scientific research to the improvement of industry.

The Mellon Institute, founded by A. W. and R. B. Mellon, was one of the first institutions to engage in this work. Its director, Dr. E. R. Weidlein, and assistant director, W. A. Hamor, point out in their book, "Science in Action," that while research such as the institute conducts has made it possible to displace human labor with machinery, it has also created new products and new industries and thereby created new jobs.

In a report on "How to Tackle Unemployment" by a British Liberal party committee consisting of David Lloyd George, the Marquess of Lothian and B. Seebohm Rowntree, they speak of the valuable work done by the Mellon Institute and recommend "that the state should take the initiative in establishing an institution of this kind in Britain and in helping it with its preliminary financing."

This recommendation may, perhaps, be regarded as something in the way of an approach to certain of the tenets of "technocracy."

Lovers—And Others

In Hollywood, the women are practicing "depression economy," by passing along their husbands so that one little important title makes at least three American marquises.

To change "united" into "untied" requires only the transposition of one letter—and the price of the fare to Reno.

Mother may not have known how to do the crawl stroke, drive a plane or paint a Cupid's bow on her lips; but she knew enough about "baiting and casting," so that when she reeled in, she usually had an eligible on the end of her line.

This is the time of year when father begins to hope secretly that Santa will leave a nice, substantial young man under the mistletoe or behind the grand piano who will take a big load off his hands.

The bridegroom may not be an important item at a smart wedding; but he has the comfort of knowing that he's the only excuse for all the excitement.

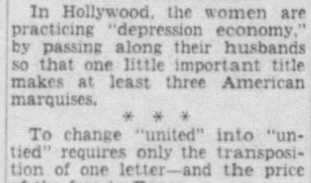
Switzerland may have the most striking scenery in the world—but America has the most stunning billboards. France may boast the best wines, but America claims the best crooners, the best ice cream and the best bath tubs. Italy may have the most successful marriages—but America has the pleasantest divorces.



Nobody has so little patience with the follies of young lovers as the man who has just recovered from a foolish infatuation—and nobody can preach such an ardent sermon for prohibition as the man who is just getting over a next-morning headache.

Isn't It So?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Thoughts while strolling: Why does a slice of cheese taste so much better in a store? Dave Town and Sir William Hicks look alike. Frazier Hunt is a youthful double for Lord Oxford. Also, what a resemblance between Clare Briggs and Lord Beaverbrook. And Mrs. William Gaxton and Frances Williams.

One-word description of Judith Anderson — muffled. Francine Larrimore's hair suggests fire in a thorn bush. That paper hat and noise-maker shop. Controller Berry seems to have lost his halo. The new Shepherd of the Lambs—Frank Crumit. I used to bicycle to his home town—Jackson, O.

Phil Lennen, a Syracuse (N. Y.) boy, who made good in the city. I mix Glenn Anders and Glenn Hunter, and Jack Hazzard and Hassard Short. That new Washington Bridge may become a headache for bondholders. None of the light comedians, save William Gaxton, touches Willie Collier. Jack Donahue's former partner—Jack Boyle.

Wish I could look like those sprigs who wear the walk-up tailor suits. Lili Damiti doesn't look vampish, anyway. What became of Mabel Boll? One of my favorite people—George White. Broadway's lady of sorrow—Belle Baker. And the Friar's court jester, Joe Laurie, Jr.

If I ever went on the stage, I'd like to play banquet parts. You know, eating roles. Those pretty, crooning Loomis sisters. The glittery, Euclidean displays in the nut store windows. Christopher Morley. What I could do to a slab of black walnut taffy—if the bridge-work would hold!

Wilfred J. Funk's books of light verse have their chief appeal to the slang-loving youngsters, although he, himself, is high in the erudite circles of dictionary publishing and high-brow magazine editing. A Doctor of Letters, writer of ponderous editorials and an authority on Shakespeare, he is an enthusiastic follower of the comic strip, and a roller-in-the-aisle at Mickey Mouse. Perhaps the greatest incongruity is his dislike for society, though he lives on a pretentious estate in the center of Southampton, Long Island's most high-nosed sniffers' sector.

Will C. Lengel, of the magazines, is fathering what braver souls long since have found a hopeless movement. He is crusading to educate New York newspapers that the big Kansas City is in Missouri and that people who live in that Kansas City are not Kansans. Lengel nurses a forlorn hope that eventually his bravure will bear fruit. He is heartened by the fact that, 20 years ago, he fathered a campaign to teach writers there are two b's in obligato. So far, he has two converts. One in Hindustan.

Five years ago, the cartoonist, H. T. Webster, was afflicted with the occupational malady, writer's cramp, a numbness in his drawing arm. For a time, it presaged abandonment of his cartoon career. Instead, he learned, as everybody knows, to draw with his left hand and in eight months was as efficient as ever. While he could draw, he could not write with his left hand. So he began to master this difficulty, and today writes a more distinguishable hand than ever before.

After hunkering two hours over its last issue, I'm unable to join the re-assuring yessers of the ultra-learned American Spectator. Everybody admires brilliancy in writing, but that baffling erudition which makes one feel the perfect dumbell is something else. I'm all defeated and everything.

Cameramen are as important as directors in contributing to the success of movie stars. Tallulah Bankhead is reported to have offended one, resulting not only in a botchy picture, but her return for a New York stage engagement.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Giving—these days?

Outstretched hands everywhere—and you're trying to fill as many of them as you can, aren't you? Flour, bacon and beans—warm socks and a decent coat—a basket of apples and a box of toys. How poor worried eyes cry their gratitude!

And I bet you get a big kick out of it. I know. I do, too. Yet—I wonder if we should.

SHOULD WE BE PROUD OF OUR CHARITY? AND TICKLED BECAUSE WE CAN GIVE? OR SHOULD WE BE ASHAMED—ASHAMED THAT WE PERMIT CONDITIONS TO EXIST WHICH MAKE CHARITY NECESSARY?

Is this a new thought to you? It is, to me—and it has been pestering me a lot lately. Always hitherto, I've gotten a big-hearted glow when I signed a Red Cross check or nailed up a charity box. But lately—going up and down the country, seeing the millions of poor, desperate, humiliated men and women who are forced to accept that charity—I'm doing a lot of thinking.

You bet it is! And it's also a darned sight jollier for the one who's doing the giving. I've been on the receiving line myself, and I'm telling you, stranger, charity may be a virtue to the dispenser of doles, but it's a bitter dose to any decent soul who has to accept it.

Why are they down and out? What has made it necessary for them to accept our charity?

Sometimes they are poor through their own laziness and shiftlessness. But many a time they've done their best and failed and are, actually, the innocent victims of circumstances.

AND YOU AND I ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THOSE CIRCUMSTANCES.

God has given us a good world to run, and the makings to run it with. There is plenty of food to eat. There is plenty of work to be done. There is enough of everything for everybody. All that is needed is intelligent planning and control. And we, who are able to give charity today, have the brains wherewith to plan, the character wherewith to control.

BUT WE HAVEN'T USED THEM.

We've let things get into a hopeless mess through our own laziness and greediness, cowardice and sentimentality. And, as a result, millions of decent, honest people are out of work, homeless, hungry, desperate.

Fathers and mothers are killing themselves rather than face the agony of their miserable babies.

ALL BECAUSE YOU AND I WOULDN'T GET BUSY!

YET WHEN WE GIVE SOMEONE A HAND OUT, WE'RE PROUD! WE CERTAINLY HAVE OUR NERVE!

Instead of being proud when we hand a desperate man a dime, we should be ashamed. We should be lashed with remorse. For that man is desperate because we were delinquent. If we had done our job right, he'd still have his job.

EVERY IDLE MAN IN AMERICA IS A REPROACH TO EVERY OTHER CITIZEN.

Even the lazy and shiftless and imbecile are a reproach to us. We should not allow the diseased and insane to breed. We should not allow helpless children to be raised by cruel or ignorant or shiftless parents. We should not allow families to be housed in pig sties, or herded in tenements, where the growing child has no chance to become acquainted with beauty or order.

Every idle person every sick person, every lazy, stupid vicious or simple-minded person is the direct consequence of your and my negligence. And if we must pay for that negligence by giving charity, we should do it in humility—not in pride.

The Tax-Free Bond Evil

"Tax-Exempt Bond Issues in Demand—Long-Term Government and State Offerings Find Ready Market."

New high prices were recently recorded for a new issue of long-term bonds by the federal government. Only last week the state of New York was able to sell its obligations on a basis close to 3 per cent.

This reveals an increasing prejudice on the part of investors against taxable securities and in favor of tax-exempt securities from which government derives no revenue.

One of the arguments advanced by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, in favor of a general manufacturers' excise tax, when the revenue bill was before the Senate last May, was that such a tax would reach the income of investors in various types of tax-exempt securities which it is estimated that state and local governments are issuing at the rate of one thousand million dollars a year.

Refuting the arguments of the opponents of a general manufacturers' excise tax, Senator Walsh said:

"They contend also that excise taxes will in reality be paid by the same class of our citizens as now pay income taxes. . . . In my judgment this is a superficial and inaccurate appraisal of the situation.

"There are now outstanding in the country twenty thousand million dollars of tax-exempt securities, and the income from this gigantic aggregation of capital is beyond the reach of any income tax we may impose, and contributes nothing to the support of the government.

"But we do reach the income from tax-exempt securities through excise taxes. Whatever part of this vast increment of wealth is spent for the purchase of goods, wares, or merchandise—and it may be safely assumed that a large part is so expended—would be taxed under a general manufacturers' excise tax."

There are three practical remedies for the evil involved in tax-exempt securities so increasingly attractive to those wealthy investors chiefly concerned in dodging their proportionate share of the taxes required to support federal, state and local government.

One remedy is an amendment to the federal Constitution to prohibit the future issuance of tax-exempt bonds. Pending before the Congress is a resolution proposing such an amendment, sponsored by Senator Bingham, of Connecticut.

Another remedy is a general manufacturers' excise tax that will serve as a check on the enormous increase in new issues or tax-exempt securities until the Bingham amendment can be submitted by the Congress and ratified by the states.

A third and very important remedy is to reduce excessive income taxes and induce investment of incomes in productive job-creating enterprise and industry.

If Congress at the present session will levy a general manufacturers' excise tax and a beer tax, and submit a constitutional amendment forbidding the issuance of any more tax-free securities by federal, state or local governments, it will balance the budget and lay the foundation for a fair and effective system of taxation.
